Getting into the Latin American spirit

STUDENTS at Briarcliff Academy in Carmel dressed in native costumes from Latin American countries, performed Spanish songs and dances, and ate a lunch of authentic south-of-the-border food as part of the second annual Pan American Day Friday, April 26. The event, organized by Briarcliff Spanish

City may order downtown environmental studies

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council now is confronted with so many pending applications for major projects that it may order a comprehensive "cumulative" environmental impact report for the entire downtown commercial district.

A requirement for the several developments jointly to prepare a cumulative EIR would be a major shift in planning philosophy for the city, which in the past rarely has ordered even single-project environmental impact reports.

The concept behind a cumulative EIR is to require a developer — or in this case several builders — to prepare a comprehensive study that analyzes the environmental effects of other projects in addition to the one development under submission.

For example, under present policy Ray Freschi would have to prepare an environmental impact report that concentrates on the effects his proposed Junipero Avenue condominium and commercial project will have on the city.

But if the council orders a cumulative EIR, Freschi's project would be considered in light of an environmental analysis of all the neighboring proposed projects, such as actor Clint Eastwood's San Carlos Street retail and office building, Alan Williams' condominium application and the Little family's plan to rebuild the Carmel Sands Lodge and Simpson's Restaurant project.

The cumulative impact report could be a planning tool similar to a general plan.

Thus, the city could deny or approve a single project based on whether all nearby past, present and future developments would have effects that could not be adequately alleviated, such as parking, traffic and water supply problems.

The council will consider a potential requirement that several applicants jointly finance a cumulative impact report when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, May 7 in the Bingham Room at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

The estimated cost of such a report is Money follows ability

Dear Editor:

Who knows more about which conductor is efficient than the musicians playing under his direction?

Their judgment was not a sudden one. In November of 1984, at all three concerts — Monterey, Carmel, Salinas — the musicians of the orchestra gave a standing ovation to Oleg Kovalenko, by far the most qualified of the guest conductors who tried out for the position of retiring conductor, Haymo Taeuber, who also endorses Kovalenko as his successor.

Top quality music will always bring in funds. The leading conductors of the great orchestras — Toscanini, Szell, Leinsdorf, Ormandy, Maazel, for example — are chosen for one reason: their musical ability. The necessary money has always followed.

Dedicated to forest

Dear Editor:

Matt Smith was a wise and kindly man. As chairman of the Carmel Forestry Commission, he always cut through to the heart of any question before it.

He was dedicated to the concept of an urban forest in Carmel and many people will retain the memory of Matt Smith inspecting the trees in the downtown blocks assigned to him.

People like him have made Carmel the unique place it is. We are all better for having known him.

Restore animal funds

Dear Editor:

Ronald Reagan's new budget proposes to eliminate all funding for the Animal Welfare Act passed in 1966.

I am appalled by the proposal to eliminate inspection of laboratories and enforcement of humane standards as required by the Animal Welfare Act.

If you care, please write the president and your congressman urging them to restore adequate funding.

Presentations were good

Dear Editor:

The presentations made by Carmel Planning Department members Bryan Roseth to the city council and Diane White to the planning commission were unfortunately heard by too few Carmel residents.

Bryan's address concerned the impact of bulky two-story houses on the privacy and rights of people already living in a neighborhood of one-story houses. Diane's presentation concerned the cumulative impact of proposed tearing down and building anew of several projects in the business district.

After attending meetings of both the council and the commission during the last several years and hearing proposals by property owners and/or their attorneys presenting their arguments and so often winning their requests by arguing that their rights, either as an individual or as a property owner, could not be denied and hearing little if anything to buttress the right of a city council to set a precedent by denying an individual development in order to preserve a community when the words "legal action" was hinted, these presentations which spoke to "the greatest good for the greatest number" were truly wonderful to hear.

It can only be hoped that the excellently presented factual material will stiffen the backbones of the two city bodies. They have responsibilities to the 99 percent of the community who do not stand before them with legal counsel in tow.

How are the birds?

Dear Editor:

Each week I look forward to your editorials, but the one last week (April 11), "Springtime is a window on eternity," was extra special.

I, too, lost a daughter almost two years ago and there is no pain in the world greater than the pain of losing a child. Time has not healed my broken heart, but I am hoping God will.

I hope the five little birds are here and well.

People still care

Dear Editor:

I wish to express my sincerest thanks to all the people who helped me after I had fallen down the steps of Harrison Memorial Library Sunday afternoon, April 14: The librarians, the persons of the fire department, of the Red Cross ambulance, and any others whom I may have inadvertently omitted.

But most of all I wish to thank Jim, who so conscientiously attended me from the time of the accident until more help arrived.

It is reassuring to live in a community such as this, where people still care.

Music is preminent

Dear Editor:

The unthinkable has taken place on the board of the Monterey County Symphony: the appointment of a new conductor on the basis he is best able to play the game while, by all accounts, another man is best able to play music.

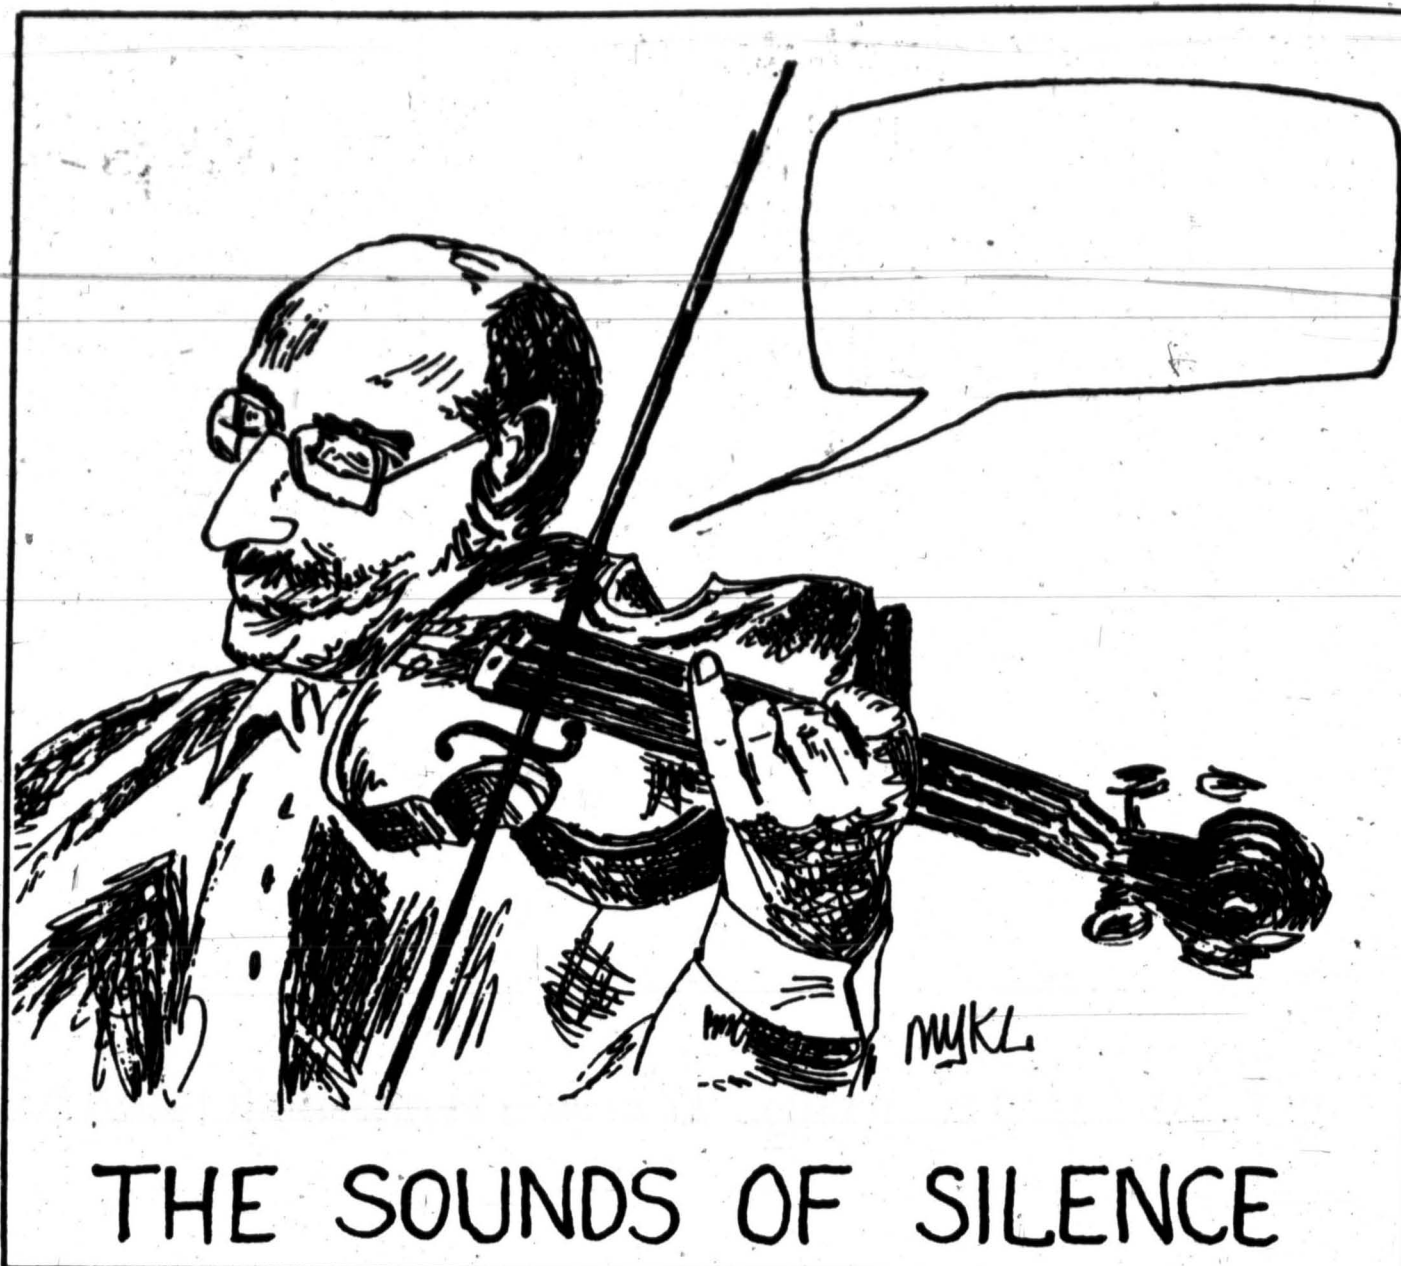

Worse, we have watched an increasingly arrogant symphony board contemptuously disregard the pleas of symphony musicians for the appointment of the man they know could best lead them in performing music — Oleg Kovalenko of Carmel.

The specious rationale offered by symphony board President Doolittle for selection of Clark Suttle over Oleg Kovalenko was that Kovalenko, although the most technically qualified of all candidates applying for the conductorship, might not be as effective in fund-raising and community relations.

Oh? Never mind the preposterousness of that particular insight. Never mind that Kovalenko is a gracious and charming man with an infectious enthusiasm for music and its performance. Never mind that he has a glowing record of community response where he has conducted. Never mind the sham and hypocrisy of an elaborate, long, guest conductor selection playoff process wherein the winner loses.

What we must now ask is: just what is the function of a symphony conductor? For that matter, what is the purpose of the orchestra itself? Fund-raising? Community relations?

I submit that the purpose of the Monterey County Symphony and the function of its conductor is to make the best possible music for us. And while doing so, afford opportunity for young musicians to gain skill through exposure to seasoned professionals like Kovalenko and the other world-class musicians — Holtman, Fabrizio, Eshoff, Dally and the rest who are all in staunch support of Kovalenko, a man whose baton they say elicits "absolute magic" from our orchestra.

If, in the face of impassioned and desperate protest by our most competent musicians, the symphony board persists in passing over Kovalenko on the grounds that he might not be good at doing what is rightfully the board's job — fund-raising — then it will have shown that it is unfit to represent either our community interests or the furtherance of music in Monterey County. And should forthwith be recalled before it can do further violence to music and musicians.

Make war obsolete

Dear Editor:

Can we defend our cities and ourselves against a Soviet nuclear attack? Or by anybody, including a terrorist?

Two-thirds of Americans think we can. But the absolute truth is we can't. Is it because we don't have the B-2 bomber? Or the MX? Or enough cruise missiles? No! No! No! These and all the other weapons in our arsenal are retaliatory weapons. We would use them when, and if, we were attacked.

The only defense we have against nuclear attack in psychology — the psychology of fear. We believe that the Soviet leaders are afraid to push the red button because in retaliation we would kill more Soviets and Russians than they would Americans. And believe it or not, that has been our nation's defense strategy or policy for more than 20 years. This policy has a name, a most appropriate name. It is called MAD, which stands for "mutually assured destruction."

Without defensive weapons we could not have won World War II. Fighter planes are essentially defensive. Their main purpose is to shoot down bombers. A perfect example was saving of England against the massive German bomber attacks. Fighters also saved our carriers and fleet in the battles of the Pacific.

Eighty percent of the American people support the need for a defense against nuclear attack. Such a defensive system has been proposed, and it has been scoffed at by some of the media. But not all. It also has been criticized by some scientists, but nowhere near, by all.

The system has been nicknamed by the media "Star Wars." If, like some of the media, you prefer to keep the policy of MAD, that title makes very good propaganda. It sounds futuristic, like something for 2010 — not something which could be developed in our time.

However, the appropriate title and concept is "strategic defense initiative." The research to develop this concept has been proposed by President Reagan. Money for the research is in the new budget. The president sees the system as a way to intercept incoming missiles. In his words: "It is better to save lives than to avenge them."

According to scientists at Los Alamos and Robert Jastrow, director of the planetary missions of the satellite Pioneer, Voyager and Galileo for NASA, this defense system would take less than 100 satellites. It would not require the deployment of the thousands of satellites claimed by those who support MAD.

Thus, the costs can be handled in the present budget proposals. Since, too, it does not take a nuclear warhead to stop a missile hurtling toward a population center or defend the satellites themselves, the strategic defense initiative would not use nuclear arms. This defense system would not therefore lead to a nuclear war in space.

The Soviets do not want us working on such a system. Why? Because the United States is a step or two ahead of them in technology needed to develop it. Yet the Soviets are spending billions a year to catch up with the technology needed. President Reagan is proposing a $2 billion program.

Today, no nation is building battleships — not because they are too costly (they are), but because weapons technology has made them obsolete. In the same manner, by implementing President Reagan's strategic defense initiative and rendering fearful nuclear missiles, both ineffective and too costly, we can now have a capacity to make nuclear weapons obsolete.

Citizens of America realize that such a system is the one sure way to achieve a true verifiable freeze and a step towards making war obsolete. Congress will be hearing this issue soon, and I would encourage that citizens let their representatives know their views.

Won't meet federal deadline

Carmel loses chance to apply for funds for library project

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL has lost an opportunity to apply for $560,000 in federal monies that would have financed half of the cost of the proposed Harrison Memorial Library expansion.

The federal government has made available through the state library system about $2.1 million in grants for new libraries, expansions or projects that will provide better access for the handicapped.

But because of its slow deliberations and inability to decide on a project, apparently

"If things run according to plan as I see it now, we're not going to make it," Library Director Margaret Pelikan said.

Carmel will not be able to apply for those monies.

The city has under preparation an environmental impact report for a $1.2 million expansion of Harrison Memorial Library directly on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues.

However, the EIR is not expected to be presented to the council for public hearings until June at the earliest.

The deadline for a completed project grant application is June 24.

And as part of the criteria for consideration, grant applications must include final design plans — in essence a complete and city-approved project.

The city has not even begun to work on the design because council members and library trustees want to wait for the environmental impact report to be certified before they undertake the cost of an architect to develop plans.

"If things run according to plan as I see it now, we're not going to make it," Library Director Margaret Pelikan told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Pelikan is quick to add that filing an application doesn't mean the city would automatically receive the requested funds since there are 44 other requests that total $7.85 million, or more than three times the funds actually available.

"We're only looking at the opportunity to apply for funds. There's no guarantee we would receive any funds or those funds in that amount," Pelikan said.

The library board has final plans for an annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue. However, the annex appears to be the council's second choice for a project.

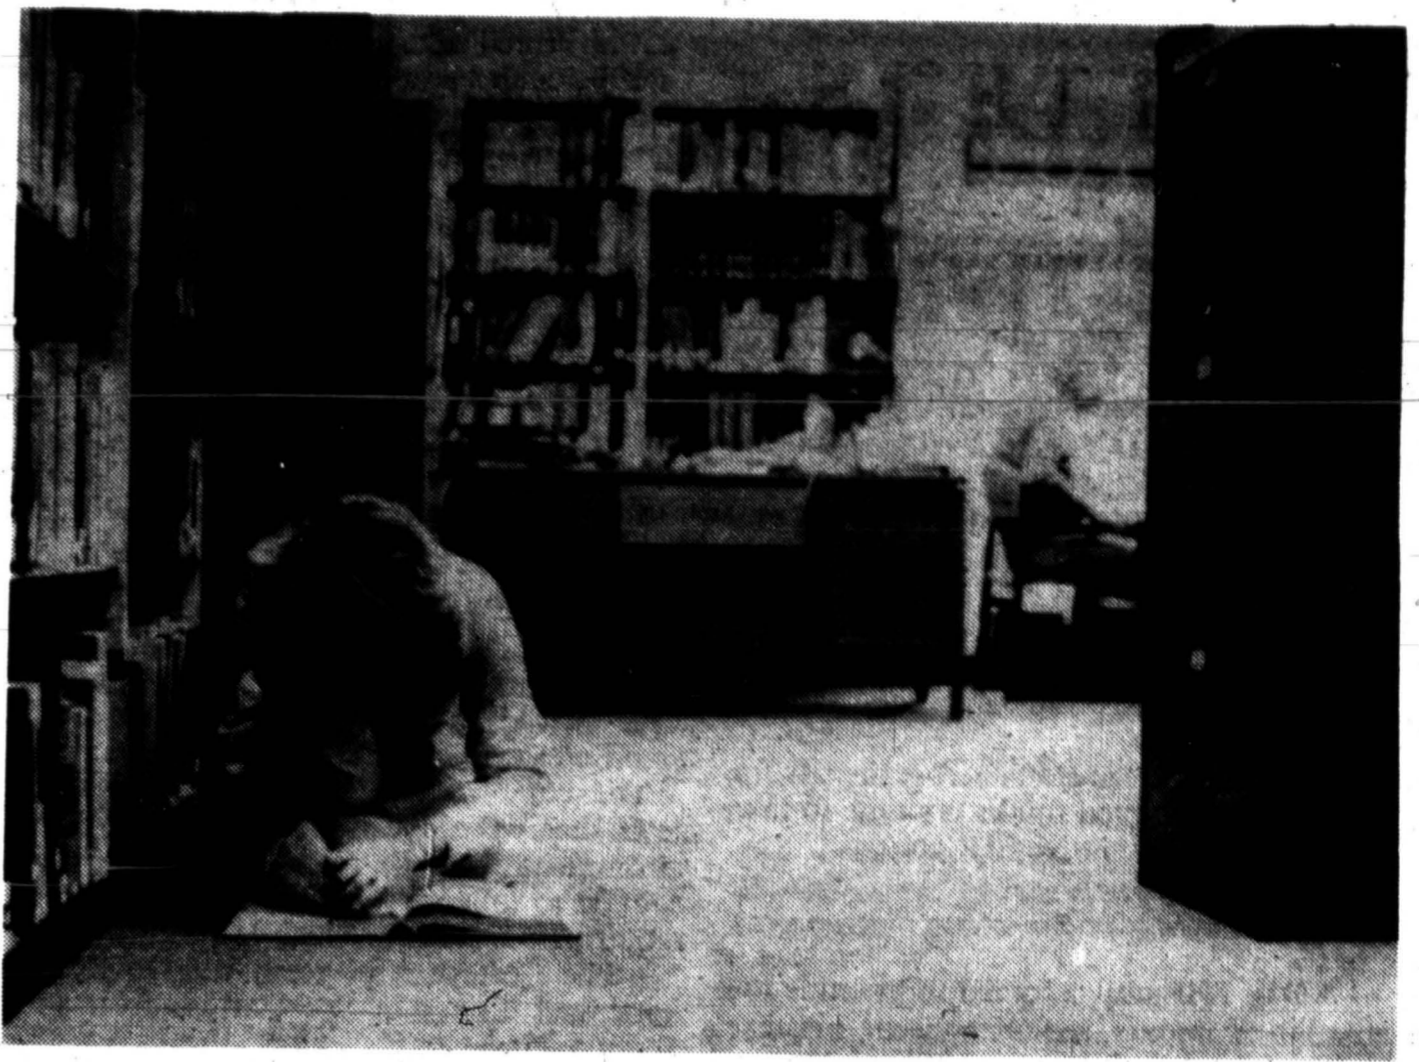

And even if the city wanted to, it could not suddenly change course and submit a grant application for the corner annex project, Pelikan said.

PELIKAN explained that since the original notice of intent to apply for funds listed the annex as the project, the city can only submit grant requests based on that proposal.

It is too late to reapply for funds for the annex on the corner, she said.

The library board also appears hesitant to speed the process to meet the application deadline.

The board could gamble and hire an architect to prepare the expansion final design plans. But trustees two years ago paid about $50,000 for the corner annex plans only to have the council stall the project with its own expansion idea on Lincoln Street.

The city has move slowly on the expansion despite knowledge since November of 1984 that the deadline to apply for $560,000 in federal funds is June 24.

Pelikan filed a preliminary notice of intent to apply for the funds on Feb. 25. The notice of intent is a preliminary application, but it is required under the guidelines. The notice filing was approved by the library board.

"If you miss any one of the steps you can't continue in the process," Pelikan said.

The state library system March 22 notified the city that its application met the criteria and that Carmel is eligible to submit a formal comprehensive application by June 24.

"An environmental impact report is a time-consuming process. It does look at more than just one project. It looks at all of the alternatives," Pelikan said.

Three members of the Carmel City Council contacted by this newspaper did not appear eager to try and speed the process so the application can be submitted.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend admitted that "the sense of urgency needed to come into play a lot earlier" when asked why there could not have been better communication between the council, which is in charge of the EIR, and the library board, which is responsible for the grant application.

For the mayor the question "unhappily" is moot since she believes it would be impossible to push the project through by June 24.

Councilman Robert Stephenson asked how many applicants there are for the funds. After being told, he said one out of 45 chances is not worth the gamble in view of the additional overtime costs and problems associated with not thoroughly studying such a major project.

"The EIR may come back and say it's not good to build on Lincoln Street. How do we know?" Stephenson said.

Councilman David Maradei does not believe the city should rush a project just for a chance to apply for a grant.

"The library project is still an 'if' project. It hasn't really reached a point where we can make a clear decision," he said.

Grunion Run on market again, council may purchase

THE FORMER Grunion Run restaurant has appeared on the market again and the Carmel City Council may once again ponder buying the 16,000 sq. ft. site.

The property became available when Sam Garzone decided not to renew his option to buy after the Carmel Board of Adjustments appeared ready to rule that his proposed development would need a full-scale environmental impact report.

Garzone had proposed to build 10 condominiums and two apartments on the Grunion Run property, south side of Fourth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

Garzone's troubles began April 10 when the board of adjustments in a special meeting required Ray Freschi to prepare an EIR for Freschi's condominium and commercial project on Junipero Avenue.

Garzone's project was reviewed, but a decision was postponed until April 24. But Garzone seemed destined to prepare an EIR.

Meanwhile, the city council has under consideration whether several proposed downtown projects pose enough threat of environmental problems to warrant an all-inclusive "cumulative impact" EIR.

The council is expected to address that question and the projects involved May 7. (See related story, this issue.)

Garzone is fearful that he would have to share the cost of an estimated $40,000 cumulative environmental impact report or prepare a separate EIR for his project.

The cost of an environmental impact report and accompanying delay of approval of the project forced Garzone to drop his plans, said architect Fred Keeble.

Since Garzone has not renewed his option, it appears the city may try to buy the Grunion Run site from the Doud estate.

The council commissioned an appraisal of the site before Garzone obtained an option. The appraisal lists the value of the property at about $960,000.

But the council did not push purchase plans in view of Garzone's proposal.

Now, Mayor Charlotte Townsend wants the council to consider purchase of the site.

The mayor believes the council should study the site for possible parking and public restroom uses.

"The city remains interested and will always be interested in anything that helps alleviate the parking problems," she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook April 26.

'WE DO have to look at the tradeoff of costs versus benefits," the mayor continued.

Mayor Townsend wants the council to consider every piece of commercial property available.

"We're going to look at and examine anything that may help us ease our traffic and parking problems," she said.

The mayor had voiced similar sentiments while Garzone's application was still pending, but the rest of the council was lukewarm to her suggestions.

Councilmembers at the time said the city has too many projects — including library expansion and beach rehabilitation — to get involved in another program.

And Councilman Robert Stephenson pointed out that the city already has the large north field of Sunset Center as a possible site for a multi-story parking garage.

But with Garzone's plans withdrawn, the council may at least take a look at the Grunion Run site.

"If the price is right and the city could make some good use of it, no I wouldn't be opposed to looking at it," Stephenson said.

There is some merit to one suggestion, which envisions the Grunion Run site as a "delivery depot," Stephenson said.

Under that proposal, large trucks would deliver goods to that site and then the individual shops would be responsible for picking up the merchandise, he explained.

This would remove the large delivery trucks from the traffic-congested downtown, Stephenson added.

As for parking, Stephenson said: "Sunset Center is the best parking site, this however is at the other end of town."

But Councilman David Maradei insists that the city already has too many projects to concern itself with another major purchase at this time.

"We still have other major issues that have to be resolved. The Grunion Run is still way down on my list," Maradei said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold was out of town and unavailable for comment. However, she previously had agreed with Maradei that the city needs to settle its other programs before launching a new project.

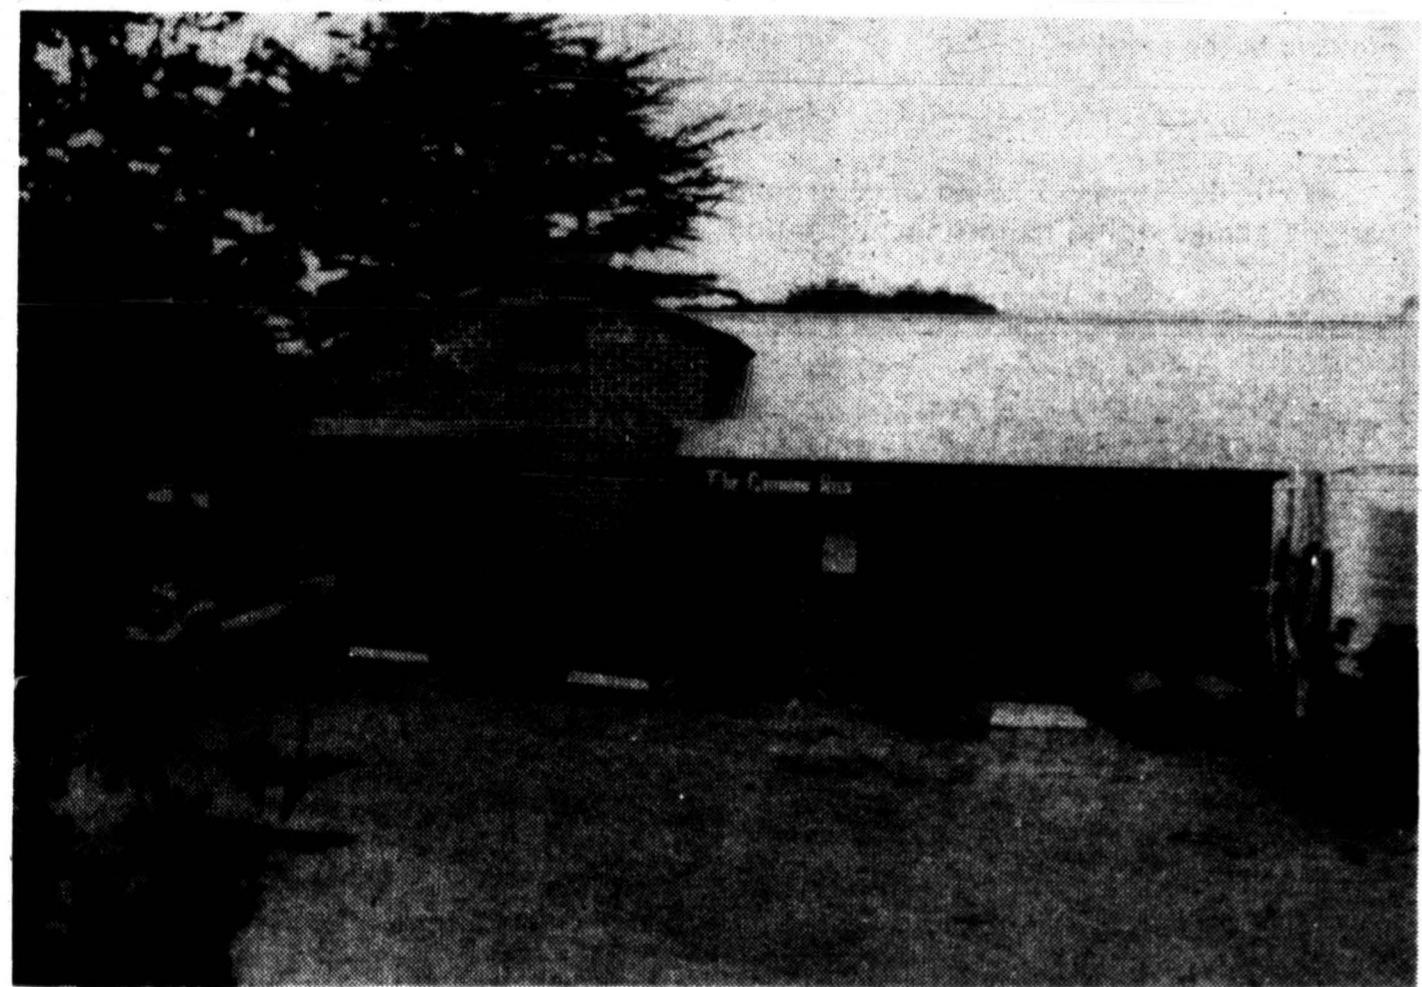

Councilman James Wright prefers not to discuss issues except in council meetings.

CVPOA general meeting May 5

A general meeting of Carmel Valley Property Owners Association members will be convened Sunday, May 5 at Rancho Canada Golf Club to hear Marit Evans, Monterey County Planning Commissioner, speak on "Planning Issues of Vital Concern to Carmel Valley." The meeting will begin at 5 p.m.

Jerry Foote, president of CVPOA, said the program will deal with environmental, water, master plan and other issues of interest to Valley residents.

The public is also invited to attend. Wine and cheese will be served.

THE CITY may once again take a hard look at possible purchase of the now-closed Grunion Run property, south side of Fourth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets. Owner Sam Garzone, concerned about the cost and delays of an anticipated environmental impact report, has withdrawn plans for a 10-condominium and two-apartment complex on the 16,000 sq. ft. site. Mayor Charlotte Townsend thinks the location might be good for a parking lot and public restrooms. She has been the primary supporter of at least considering purchase of the site, which is appraised at about $960,000. So far, her suggestion has been greeted rather lukewarmly by other council members, who believe the city has enough pending projects without undertaking another. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Carmel may get EIR on downtown building

$40,000 to $50,000 if each developer and the city equally share the price.

The concept of a cumulative EIR for the downtown projects was first suggested in the 1983 general plan.

However, because of other pressing priorities the planning staff never was able to bring a report and recommendation to the city council.

But with several projects before the city for approval, the council thinks it's time to take a look at the cumulative EIR concept.

NOW THE city is forced to examine the cumulative impact report concept because there are several major projects pending — all just north of Ocean Avenue.

Three of these projects are to be part of the council discussion next Tuesday:

- The Little family's plan to demolish and rebuild the 42-room Carmel Sands Lodge and restaurant, northeast corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue.

- Freschi's proposed six shops, restaurant and 11-condominium project on the old San Francisco Federal Savings property, west side of Junipero Avenue between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

- Eastwood's two-story retail and office complex on the west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Freschi's project is before the council because he appealed a board of adjustments decision to require an environmental impact report. However, the board did not rule that Freschi had to be part of a cumulative impact study.

The Littles' project is before the council on appeal by Councilman James Wright, who questioned the consistency of the board of adjustments, which ordered an EIR for Freschi but did not require a similar study from the Littles.

The board of adjustments, although it heard a staff report on the possibility of a cumulative impact report requirement, did not specifically address that issue during its April 10 discussion of the Little and Freschi projects.

But Wright wants to see the cumulative impact question answered before these projects proceed.

In a related matter, the council is to adopt "findings" to support its April 2 denial of actor Clint Eastwood's project.

Eastwood's proposed development has been cited as one of the pending projects that have forced the council to re-examine its stand on environmental impact reports.

The completion of several previous projects that were not required to prepare environmental reports also has caused the council to reflect on its past policy of rarely requiring the studies. These projects include:

- The Cottage Row retail shop complex, northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

- The Chimneys, an 11-unit condominium complex on the southwest corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues.

- Heather Glenn, a two-story office, retail and apartment complex on the west side of Mission Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

The city also must look into the future when two major sites have been suggested for condominium use. They are:

- The Handley property on the northeast and northwest corners of Junipero and Fourth avenues.

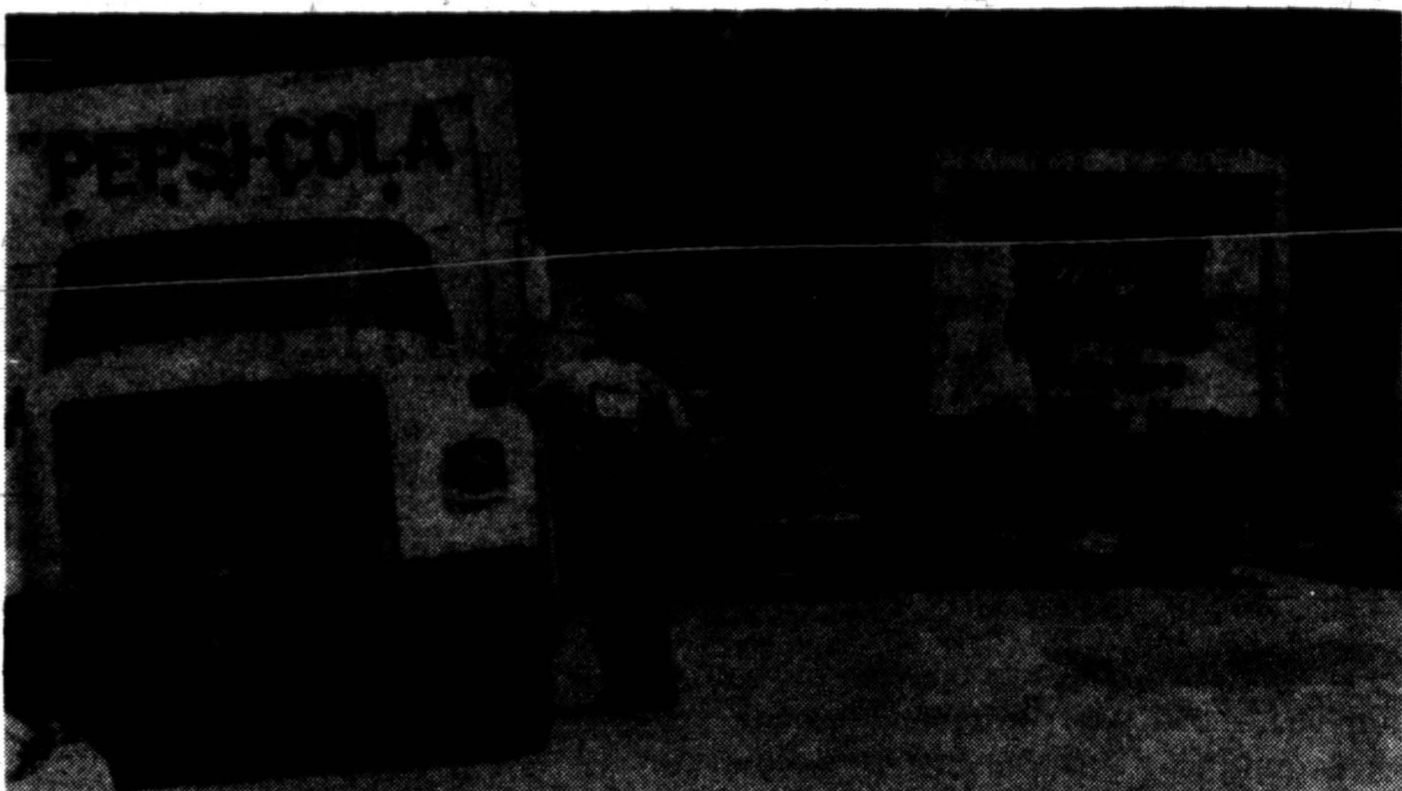

Alan Williams has submitted tentative plans for the northwest corner and intends to build on the northeast parcel.

- The Grunion Run property, south side of Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets. Sam Garzone has dropped plans for a condominium/apartment project, but the site is for sale and zoned for multiple-family use.

THE QUESTION before the council is just how much of this development the city can absorb before its resources are strained.

That answer could be in the cumulative environmental impact report.

And that is something the council needs to weigh as it considers his appeal of the board of adjustments decision not to require an act report that could be a tool to alter or even halt unwanted development. (Michael Gardner photo.)

EIR for the Carmel Sands project, according to Councilman James Wright.

In his letter of appeal, he wrote that the California Environmental Quality Act allows the city to review projects based on the impacts of past, present and future developments.

"It is important for the city to take a comprehensive overview of those projects which fall into these three designations.

"In order to comply with the clear intent of the law governing environmental review...I believe that the Sands should be required to be part of a comprehensive environmental impact report analyzing the cumulative impacts of the specifically-listed projects."

Wright lists five specific concerns:

- "Traffic: The study prepared by the consultant for the Sands estimates an increase of 2 percent generated by the renovation of the site.

- "Parking: While the Sands proposes to provide 60 parking spaces which meets our current code, the current standards are not practical and are inadequate to meet the needs of our community.

- "Drainage: Currently, no underground drainage system occurs along San Carlos Street from Fourth Avenue southerly to Ocean Avenue.

- "All runoff from sites drain the length of San Carlos to the Ocean Avenue drainboxes. This is particularly important during the construction period as well as with runoff associated with ongoing maintenance operations at the site.

- "Water use: While the applicant has provided the records for water usage at the Sands for the past, no substantial documentation has been provided on the projection of water usage at the site if the project goes forward.

- "While the concept of a cistern (to recycle rainwater for irrigation) is intriguing and the applicant claims that (County Environmental Health Officer) Walter Wong has approved the idea, no factual documentation was presented nor was an authorizing permit for the cistern provided for the board.

- "Construction impacts: I have a tremendous concern regarding the impacts during construction on San Carlos Street, a major accessway into the commercial district, particularly with regards to the timing of other projects in the area.

THE development of an underground parking garage would require the utilization of street parking while the excavation was underway.

"We are all familiar with the impacts on vehicular and pedestrian traffic of the excavation at Cottage Row. San Carlos Street was closed at periodic times as was Sixth Avenue during the construction of Cottage Row when concrete pouring occurred.

"Pedestrian and vehicular traffic flows will be impaired during the Sands construction and the removal of the dirt during the excavation period will also have an impact on our traffic and our roadways."

Wright concluded his letter by posing two questions that he believes are the key to whether a cumulative EIR is necessary downtown:

"Does the project have the potential to affect the environment particularly in conjunction with other major projects recently completed, proposed or pending?

"Are the effects considerable when viewed in conjunction with the affects of these past, present and probably future projects?"

Wright's answers to both of his own questions are the same — "obviously yes."

The board of adjustments reasoned that the Little family did not need an environmental impact report because the project already is in place and thus any impacts now occur.

And the board believes the additional parking spaces and water-savings devices are sufficient to offset any concerns about parking and water supply problems.

The Freschi project is another matter, the board of adjustments stated.

Members believe the project does pose enough potential significant environmental effects to require a full-scale EIR.

Freschi has appealed that decision.

Freschi argues that his project tenants actually will generate less traffic than the bank did.

UNDER THE proposed use, the savings and loan activity will not exist," Freschi wrote in his letter of appeal.

"The restaurant activity continues the same. The commercial tenant usage remains substantially the same and with the construction of the additional nine condominium units the totality of traffic created will be less than (that) which existed when the site was utilized by the savings and loan."

Downtown environmental study urged in Carmel

Freschi said he will provide 15 parking spaces, or nine more than exist now. A decrease in restaurant square footage will result in less water use. The city has a policy of allowing water for residential projects, which indicates his condominiums are a desired use despite extra water demands, Freschi argues.

Freschi's letter also details a staff report that indicates there will be little or no environmental impact in the areas of "drainage, plant life, noise and design."

Aside from the specifics of each project, the council appears to want to take a hard look at the issue of cumulative impacts.

Councilman David Maradei said the city has wanted to review the issue for two years, but there were other pressing problems in the residential district to cope with first.

"During the general plan discussions we requested an overall environmental impact report to determine exactly the potential of growth we will have," Maradei said. "We will grow to the extent the council will allow."

But the comprehensive EIR was sidetracked, Maradei said, while the planning commission wrestled with controls on second story houses, second kitchens and transient rentals.

"Those were priorities because of the immediate danger to the residential character of Carmel," Maradei said.

But with those projects near completion, Maradei believes it is time to "move to the commercial zone" and study the potential affects of growth, perhaps through the cumulative EIR tool.

Councilman Stephenson too wants to at least discuss the potential of a cumulative impact report.

But he is reluctant to force the Little family to participate.

"That's an impact that's already been here. They have been here for about 40 years. They're really relieving some of the parking problems," Stephenson said.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend did not want to comment on the Little appeal.

However, she did lend support to a cumulative impact report concept even if the Littles' project is exempted.

"I think it's an excellent idea. The piecemeal approach has not served us well," the mayor said.

COTTAGE ROW is one of the developments that was allowed by the city to proceed without a full-scale environmental impact report. The council now has under consideration a shift in policy to require upcoming projects to prepare a comprehensive cumulative impact report. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Search for Carmel school superintendent narrowed to three from list of hundreds

THE FIELD of candidates for superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District has been narrowed to three from a preliminary list of hundreds of applicants.

The three finalists, who remain unidentified, are to be interviewed by the board of education in a closed session Friday, May 3.

If a preferred candidate is agreed on that day, the board is expected to send representatives to visit the finalist's district while contract negotiations begin.

An announcement of the final selection is not expected until at least mid-May.

The district is expected to pay the new superintendent at least $50,000 annually.

Former Supt. William Rand resigned Oct. 8 in a move that has generated furor in the community. The three trustees — Robert Fenton, James Yates and Susan Bromfield — who accepted his resignation are the targets of a July 23 recall election.

Carmel High students to attend U.N. session

SIXTEEN Carmel High School students who recently attended a Model United Nations conference at the University of California, Berkeley, plan to participate in a conference June 24-26 in San Francisco to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the organization.

Accompanied by faculty advisor Bob Harr and his wife Karen, the students spent three days in March at committee meetings, caucuses and Security Council sessions that paralleled the format of the actual United Nations.

Carmel High represented Peru, which has a seat on the Security Council this year, Harr said. To prepare for their role, students did a great deal of research and interviewed several Peruvians visiting or studying on the peninsula.

In what Harr described as a "heavy academic endeavor," the students prepared position papers in advance summarizing Peru's viewpoint on the major world crisis situations, including Afghanistan, the Middle East, Nicaragua, South Africa and the Iran-Iraq conflict.

A total of more than 1,400 students attended the conference from approximately 100 schools. Carmel High has been selected to represent one of the 15 countries on the Security Council for the past four years, Harr said. He partially credited Carmel High's successful Model UN chapter to the resources of the Monterey Peninsula in the field of international relations.

Hugo Schwyzer, Liz Dyer and Eileen Chow represented Carmel on the Security Council. The council was confronted with a mock crisis wherein a small emerging nation attempted to hold the world hostage with the threat of nuclear weapons. Council members were to respond as each delegation deemed appropriate to its "country."

Other members of the Carmel delegation were Robert Aguas, Carolyn Ammons, Anne Brocchini, Richard Brophy, Libby Colvin, Chad Dennis, Felicia Fisher, Teo King, Chris Leib, Tryg Lundquist, Erica Radon, Mark Sieve and Anne Smithson.

Financial support for the student trip was provided by Friends of Carmel Unified Schools, Padre Parents, the Carmel High student body fund, and the Monterey chapter of UN Association, U.S.A.

Carmel summer recreation offered

THE UPCOMING Carmel recreation program promises to ease those "nothing to do" summertime blahs with activities for just about every school-age youngster.

And there even will be volleyball and swimming for the adults.

Activities this summer will include programs in tennis, soccer, basketball, arts and crafts, dance, karate and swimming.

Supervised by River School teacher Steve Taylor, the summer recreation program is a joint project between the city of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District.

It is the second year of the program, which has had its political problems but seems ready to expand into a year-round project if the summer activities remain as popular as they were in 1984.

The Carmel City Council in 1984 authorized funding for a limited summer program, which eventually drew more than 500 participants and raves from nearly every parent.

The city provided funding of up to $20,000 while the school district offered the use of its facilities rent-free.

About 20 Carmel Foundation members also participated in the free senior citizen swim program offered at the Seaside pool. The city funds paid transportation costs for seniors.

But there was some opposition from city residents, who petitioned the council not to provide city monies to fund programs open to outside-the-area residents. There also was some concern about duplication of activities offered through Sunset Center.

The council, however, was convinced that the recreation program provided a much-needed service.

A summary of the 1984 summer program indicated that user fees paid nearly the entire cost of the program and that the majority of participants resided within the city or immediately adjacent neighborhoods such as Mission Fields, Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods.

Those who lived outside the city limits were charged higher fees.

Based on the success of the summer program, the council authorized a small adult winter program that included volleyball, soccer and basketball. There are 10 Carmel teams in the Abalone soccer league, 41 basketball players and 30 people who participated in volleyball.

The senior citizen swimming and adult volleyball program also will continue this summer.

In addition, a separate swimming program at the high school and in the Valley will be offered in conjunction with the school district, Carmel Barracudas Swim Club and Carmel Valley Community Center.

FOLLOWING is a list of the activities offered, fees and times.

All fees listed are for city residents. Non-city residents of the Carmel Unified School District will be charged an additional $5 and outside-the-district residents will pay an extra $10.

• Summer activities camp: A variety of day care activities, sports, games and movies will be offered at River School for ages six through 14.

Day care is available Monday through Friday from June 18 to Aug. 24. Cost is 90 cents per hour. Three different packages are available — 90 hours for $80, 140 hours for $125 and 225 hours for $180.

• Carmel summer recreation tennis clinic: A top-ranked National Collegiate Tennis Association player, Chad Ables, will offer hour-long lessons for ages nine to 17 at 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. and again from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. from June 18 to July 19. Another session will be from July 22 to Aug. 24.

Both sessions, which also will be assisted by Pebble Beach Beach and Tennis Club Pro Andy Briant, are at the high school. Fee is $25.

• Super soccer clinics: Carmel High School soccer coach Dick Zury will offer clinics for beginners to advanced boys and girls from 1

Musicians' strike cancels concerts

By ROBERT MISKIMON

A FINAL concert series May 5-7 was cancelled Tuesday as a strike between Local 616 of the American Federation of Musicians and the Monterey County Symphony took full effect.

Striking orchestra members presented their case at a Tuesday afternoon meeting of the symphony grievance committee at Sunset Center in Carmel, then union representatives and the symphony executive board met again Tuesday night.

"It looks like we won't play our last concert," said Ray Fabrizio, principal orchestra flutist. "We're letting the board know how totally committed we are to this."

The musicians' principal grievance is that the symphony board of directors hired 31-year-old Clark Suttle as conductor and music director to replace retiring Maestro Haymo Taeuber. Musicians strongly favor 48-year-old Oleg Kovalenko of Carmel for the conductorship.

Suttle is associate conductor of the Phoenix Symphony and Kovalenko has been assistant conductor of the St. Louis Symphony and music director of the Green Bay (Wis.) Symphony Orchestra, among other positions. Both men were guest conductors with the Monterey County Symphony this year.

The strike, officially called by the musicians Friday, April 26, came near the end of the three-year contract between the symphony and the union, due to expire May 31.

"If we're on strike and our contract expires, then there's no orchestra," Fabrizio told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Musicians initially called a strike April 21, but then retrenched April 24 after the symphony board of directors delivered the union local a letter which threatened to fire strikers and seek legal compensation for financial losses resulting from a strike.

But Fabrizio said the musicians had not rescinded their strike because of the threats.

"After we called off the Monday strike, the impression was that we had backed off," he said. "The reason was to make another effort through the grievance procedure, the or-

Tularcitos School in CV receives top grades

THE REPORT card is in and Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley has received top marks.

A special "Program Review" of Tularcitos School was recently conducted as part of a requirement to qualify for special state "School Improvement Program" funds, which totalled about $42,000 this year.

The team spent several days on campus to talk to parents, teachers and staff, visit classes and also review test scores.

The three subject areas specifically reviewed by the team were writing, written language and school-wide effectiveness.

Tularcitos School received high marks in all three areas.

In assessing the total program, the review team stated: "We observed high expectations for what students learn, reflecting a school-wide belief that all students can learn."

"Student achievement is maintained at a high level...Respect and support among and between students and staff members are evident throughout the school," the review team report continued.

"The positive, warm atmosphere that is generated by the entire staff and students makes Tularcitos School a special place for teaching and learning."

The team, in its commendation on the "school-wide effectiveness" portion of the review complimented the school for its "positive attitude of students and staff towards learning. It is evident the school's primary business is learning."

The report now is filed with the state Department of Education and will be used when the district applies for future school improvement program (SIP) funds.

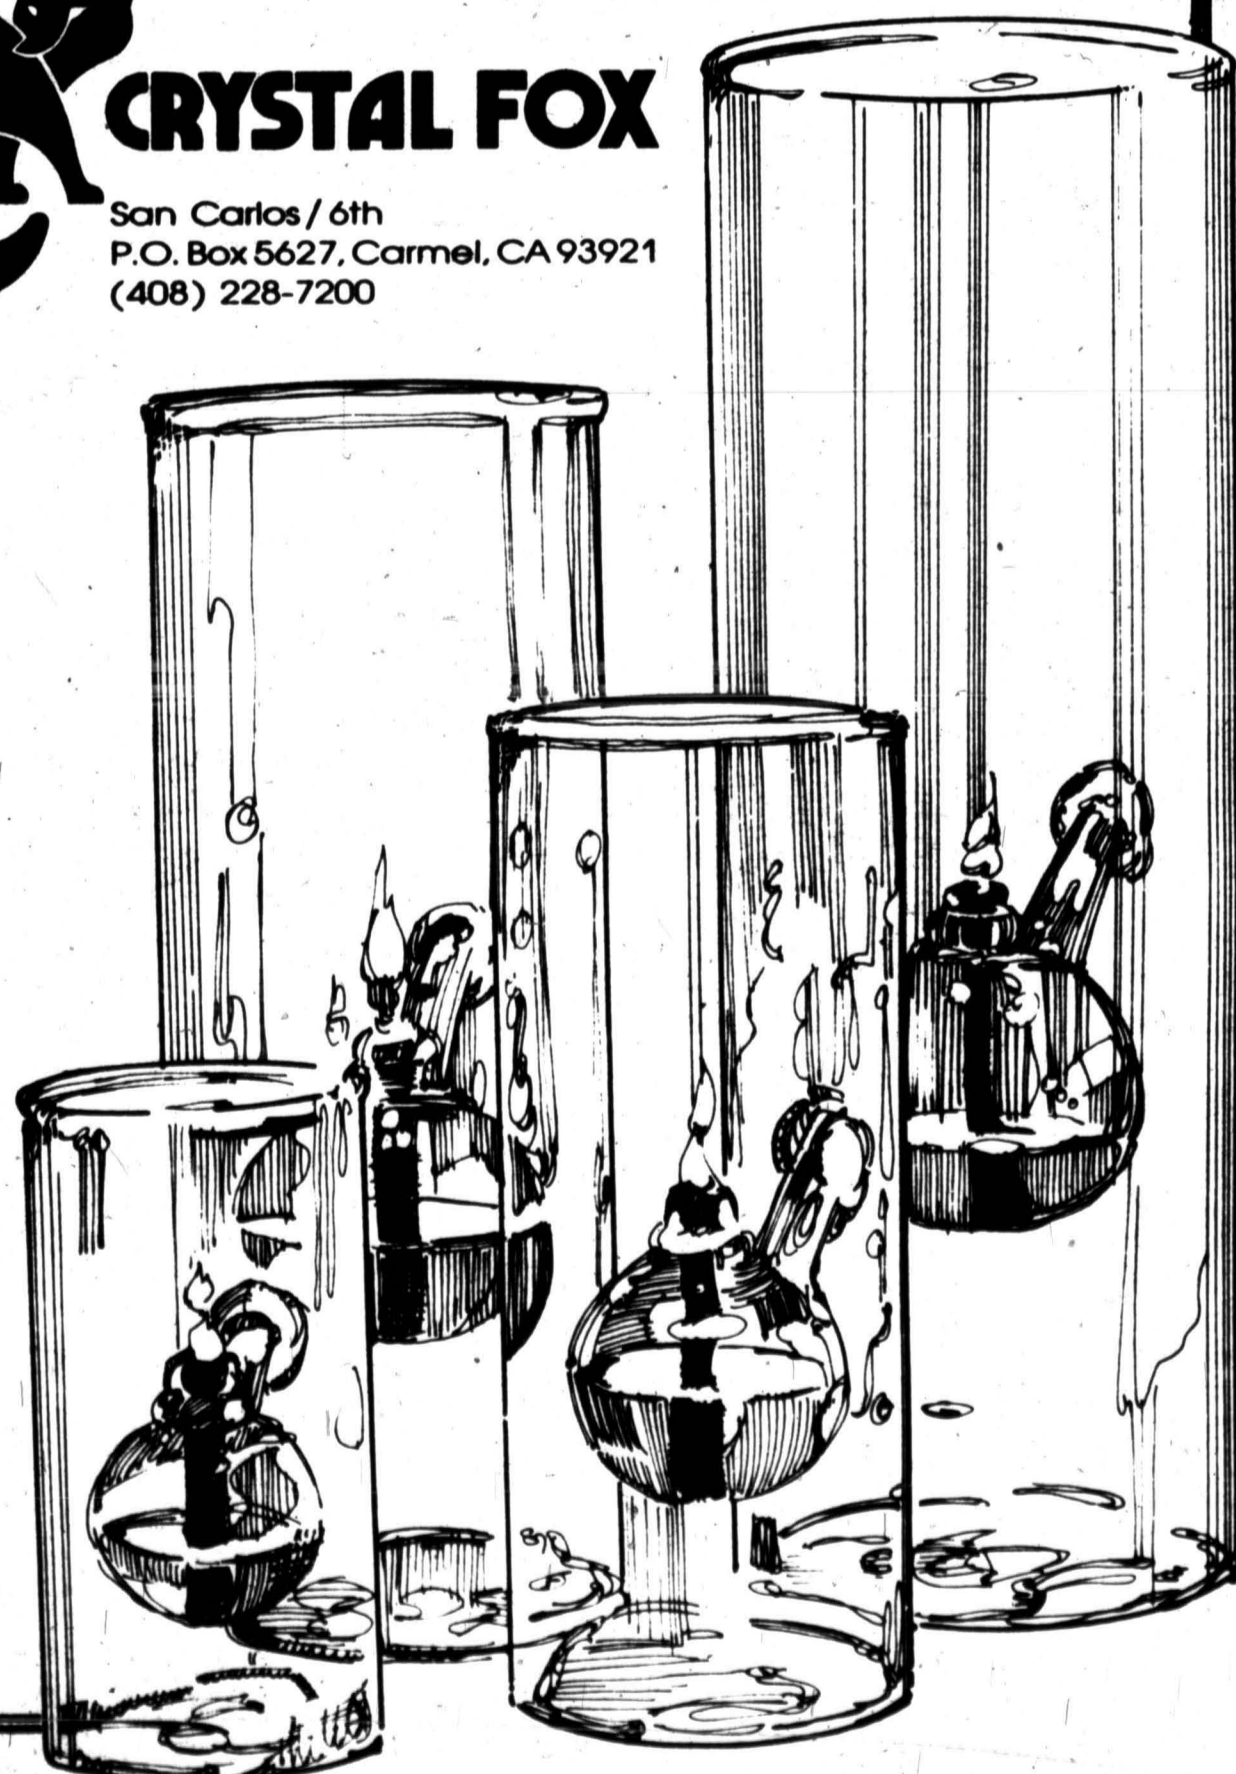

Members of the review team were: Amy Santa Cruz of the Salinas City district; Jan Miller of the North Monterey County district; and Mary Mitchell of the Monterey school district.

City receives offer on Gamble estate

The city has received its first offer on the Gamble estate lots.

Richard Wehner, Jr. of Carmel has submitted a formal offer of $235,000 to buy the largest city-owned lot on the Gamble estate, bordered by 13th and Santa Lucia avenues and Lincoln and Dolores streets.

The council is to consider the offer when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, May 7 in the Bingham room at Sunset Center, Ninth and San Carlos.

The council and the private Carmel development firm of Tescher-LeVette purchased the Gamble estate lots and subsequently rezoned the property from a 14 possible 4,000 sq. ft. lots to nine, multi-sized lots.

The city paid about

$680,000 for four lots and Tescher-LeVette paid about $715,000 for five lots, plus the two-story house.

Tescher-LeVette since has combined two lots to reduce further the number of available building sites to eight.

The city was concerned that the property would be sold to a developer who would maximize the building lots.

Fourteen new homes on the site would adversely affect the quiet residential character of the neighborhood, the council reasoned.

Wehner's offer is for the largest of nine lots, currently 8,100 sq. ft. But the city is to deed 150 sq. ft. of that lot to Tescher-LeVette so the firm can keep the dining room of the house and have adequate setbacks between properties.

Wehner has agreed to the reduction of his lot to 7,950 sq. ft. He will pay approximately $30 per square foot.

Bank site in Carmel for sale

The former National Bank of Carmel building on Dolores Street that now houses Santa Cruz County Bank and Trust is for sale at $1.8 million.

Santa Cruz Bank and Trust, which leases most of the 7,115 sq. ft. building, will remain at the site, according to William Goodrich, vice president and manager of the sales and marketing division.

"We're a leaseholder. It's immaterial to us who owns it," Goodrich told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"We have no intention of leaving there at all," he added.

The building, west side of Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues, is on the market as part of the Charlotte Doud-Vecki estate sale, realtor Greg Kraft said.

Kraft added that he does not think County Bank and Trust will relocate.

"There has been no communication to indicate that at all," Kraft said.

The building has three levels and also is used for Mark Starr's law office, Kraft said.

The building formerly housed the National Bank of Carmel, which collapsed a year ago this month because of financial troubles.

County Bank and Trust of Santa Cruz bought the assets of the National Bank of Carmel and opened branches at the two closed bank sites, on Dolores Street and at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Bulimia talk

A Carmel High School student who suffers from the eating disorder known as bulimia will discuss the problem at a special meeting Thursday, May 9.

The talk is sponsored by "We Care," an organization of parents, students and community members dedicated to reducing drug and alcohol abuse by young people.

The session, which is open to the public, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Carmel High School library. The student prefers not to be identified.

Family counselor Ron Cobley also will speak.

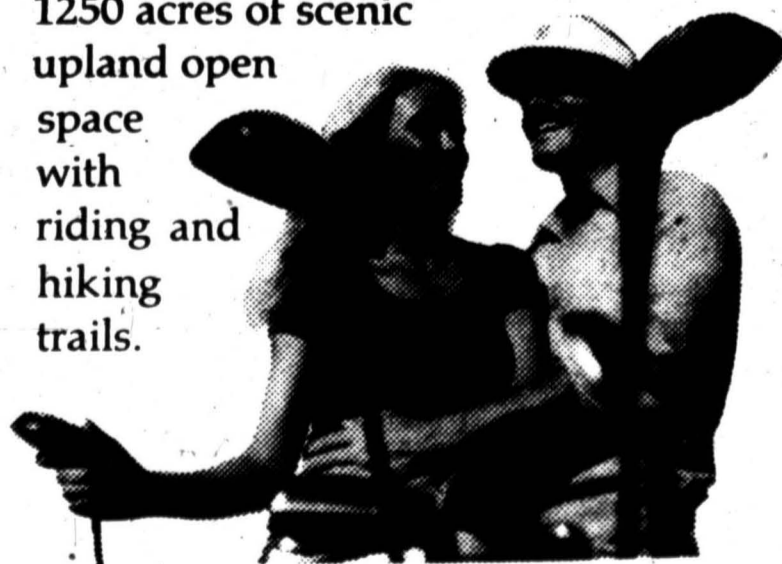

Bulimia is an eating disorder characterized by continual hunger, eating binges and vomiting.

CVPOA to discuss fate of Valley 'killer trees'

THE FATE of about 30 "killer trees" will be discussed by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Board of Directors Wednesday, May 8.

The directors will convene at 7:30 p.m. in St. Dunstan's Church near the intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads.

Directors will be presented an update on the fate of about 30 eucalyptus and oak trees alongside Carmel Valley Road.

The Monterey County Public Works Department has applied for a $45,000 federal grant to trim and remove the trees because of potential hazards to motorists who veer off the road.

The tree removal has prompted a storm of protest in the Valley because many residents do not see why trees should be removed because drivers can't stay on the road.

The board of supervisors is expected to conduct a public hearing on the grant application for the tree removal when it meets at 1:30 p.m. May 14 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

In other update reports, the CVPOA board will review:

- The Carmel Valley Overview project, which envisions about 200 senior citizen units on land donated by actors James Garner and Clint Eastwood. The property is on the north side of Carmel Valley Road about four miles east of Highway 1.

- The Boronda river erosion control project, which was outlined to residents by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District April 29. (See related story, this issue.)

- The proposed Carmel Valley Public Recreation District, which envisions a parcel tax on Valley property owners to provide a comprehensive recreation program, including trails management, parks and the community center.

Supervisors are to discuss the proposed district at 10:30 a.m. May 14.

- The status of Chateau Julien, which has applied for renewal of its use permit to continue winery operations at its facility on the south side of Carmel Valley Road about five miles east of Highway 1.

The public hearing on the use permit has been postponed until late May by Monterey County Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis.

- The formation of a committee to review the feasibility of Carmel Valley Ranch obtaining water from the Tularcitos aquifer for its two pending expansions.

Carmel Valley Ranch, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and CVPOA member Robert Greenwood are part of the committee.

Carmel Valley Ranch must explore the feasibility of obtaining water from the Tularcitos aquifer before it receives permission to connect with Cal-Am for its planned 400-unit hotel and additional 89 residences.

Wilderness near Rancho San Carlos purchased

A PRIME 4,300 acres of wilderness adjacent to Rancho San Carlos has been purchased for $1.2 million, but new owner John Murphy of Arizona says he has no plans to develop the site.

Murphy, an attorney who practices in Phoenix, bought the site from the Westbrook Lumber Co. through Carmel realtor Jean Mitchell of The Mitchell Group.

The 4,300 acres was part of the old Lloyd Morain property, east of Highway 1 and southwest of Rancho San Carlos.

Morain had sold the property to the Westbrook Lumber Co., which still retains about 1,000 acres of some of the most forested land on the site.

"If I knew I'd tell you," laughed Murphy when asked what his plans are for the property.

"I just bought it because it's a beautiful piece of property. I have no plans for it now," he said.

Murphy toured the site with a viticulturist to determine whether the acreage is suitable for a vineyard.

"That just isn't feasible. It's not usable for that," Murphy said.

Murphy said he isn't even certain whether he wants to develop a personal residence on the site. One possibility is a "cabin retreat," he said.

Murphy added that he does own a large spread in Arizona that just has a cabin and is used for skiing vacations.

Murphy's claims that he has no intention to develop the property are interesting to note in light of recent proposals for subdivisions in that area.

Arthur Oppenheimer, who owns the adjacent Rancho San Carlos, at one time envisioned a 3,800-unit village, golf course and hotel on that 20,000-acre spread.

Supervisors since zoned the property to permit only 125 units on Rancho San Carlos. Oppenheimer has filed a lawsuit to fight that zoning.

A few miles to the west, Gary Snell has plans for a 14- to 16-unit residential subdivision on the old Sawyer property in Carmel Highlands.

Snell has withdrawn his application while he tries to work with neighboring property owners who oppose the project because of potential traffic, sewage and water supply problems that may be generated by the development.

Park and ride in the Valley

"PARK AND RIDE" may have its own separate meaning in Carmel Valley. While most folks usually park their motorized vehicles and take the bus or car pool, out in the Valley it seems like there is a different interpretation. Either that or the Monterey-

Salinas Transit bus driver was going to have one strange fare Saturday afternoon. Actually, "Readi" belongs to Sandra McGowan of Carmel Valley, who had slipped into Kasey's while her transportation patiently waited outside. (Michael Gardner photo.)

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Boronda project vote hinges on state funds

RIVERFRONT residents along a 1.9 mile stretch of the Carmel River will be asked in a special election Aug. 6 whether they want to pay an average of $806 each to finance an erosion control project.

But if an anticipated $150,000 grant is not approved by the Department of Fish and Game in June, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District project will be derailed even before the election.

And, property owners still are concerned that they are being asked to support the project, schedule and financing scheme even before a final design is completed. The design is to be prepared by a new engineer, who will not be hired until June.

The special election is only for residents along the "Boronda reach" in Carmel Valley. Riverfront property owners will neither vote nor be assessed any charges.

Water management district directors — acting nearly a year after the "Boronda reach" zone was approved — in a public hearing at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club April 29 approved:

- An Aug. 6 election that asks riverfront residents whether property owners should be assessed $8.06 per lineal foot. The resident who owns 100 feet of riverfront land will be assessed $806. Renters also may vote in the tax assessment election, which can be implemented by a simple majority vote.

- A financing plan for the approximately $350,000 project. Under the financing plan, a Department of Fish and Game grant will subsidize $150,000, the Carmel River Management Plan program will pay $50,000 and property owners will be assessed the remaining $150,000.

- A schedule that estimates if the project is approved by voters that directors will conduct a public hearing Aug. 15 to complete project plans.

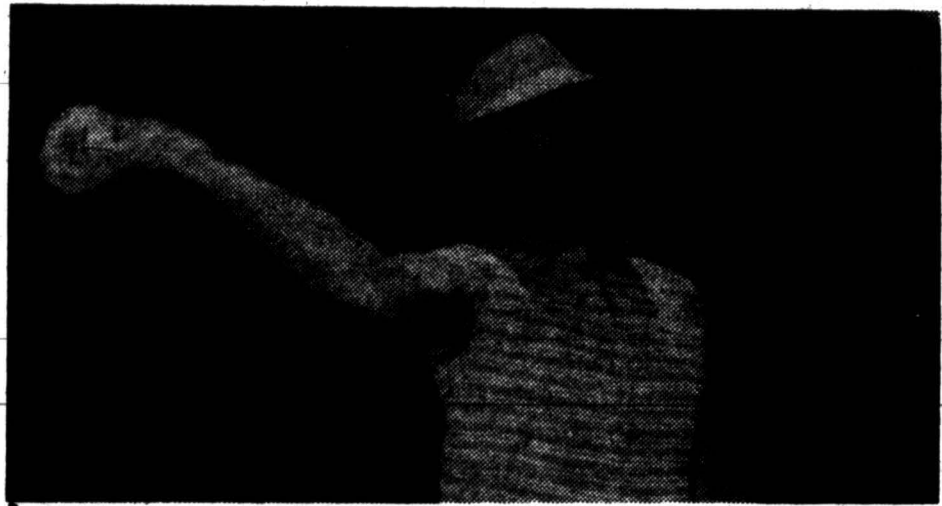

A contractor is to be selected Sept. 9 with work scheduled to begin Sept. 20. The project is to be completed by Nov. 20, under the schedule approved by directors.

The Boronda reach project is in what directors call "Zone 4" along a 1.9 mile stretch of the Carmel River from about the little league diamond near the village to the west end of Garzas Road.

Private property and the banks along the river have been seriously eroded over the past four years because of storms and changes in the channel that have caused the river flows to knock against the banks with more force.

Directors believe the installation of large protective gabions and intensive willow plantings will armor the banks and also artificially confine the river to an 80-foot wide channel.

A RESTRICTED channel would keep the river flow in a straighter course away from the banks as it approaches the Boronda Road Bridge, directors reason.

The river was its most stable in the 1960s when it had an 80 to 100-foot wide channel, according to Graham Matthews, district resource analyst.

But all of the plans may be for naught if the district is unable to obtain a $150,000 grant from the Department of Fish and Game.

Matthews and district Manager Bruce Buel are confident the grant will be approved by the state board when it meets in June. Matthews and Buel both plan a trip to Sacramento to lobby for the funding before to the vote.

"It looks very good to get those funds," Buel said. "I feel reasonably confident."

Directors have banked on the grant. The resolution for the election and financing for the project binds the district to assessing riverfront property owners only $150,000.

If the grant is denied directors may be hard pressed to convince river residents to double their assessment from about $1,500 to $3,000. A new election also would have to be ordered since the Aug. 6 vote is specifically for the $150,000 assessment.

Buel does not see much hope for another $150,000 grant if the present application is rejected. "If we don't get the grant we can't proceed. We've exhausted all the other options."

Matthews told directors that "if it falls through for some reason then obviously the project falls through."

Directors also were told Monday night there is a possibility the district may obtain a special $50,000 grant through the Department of Motor Vehicles license fees.

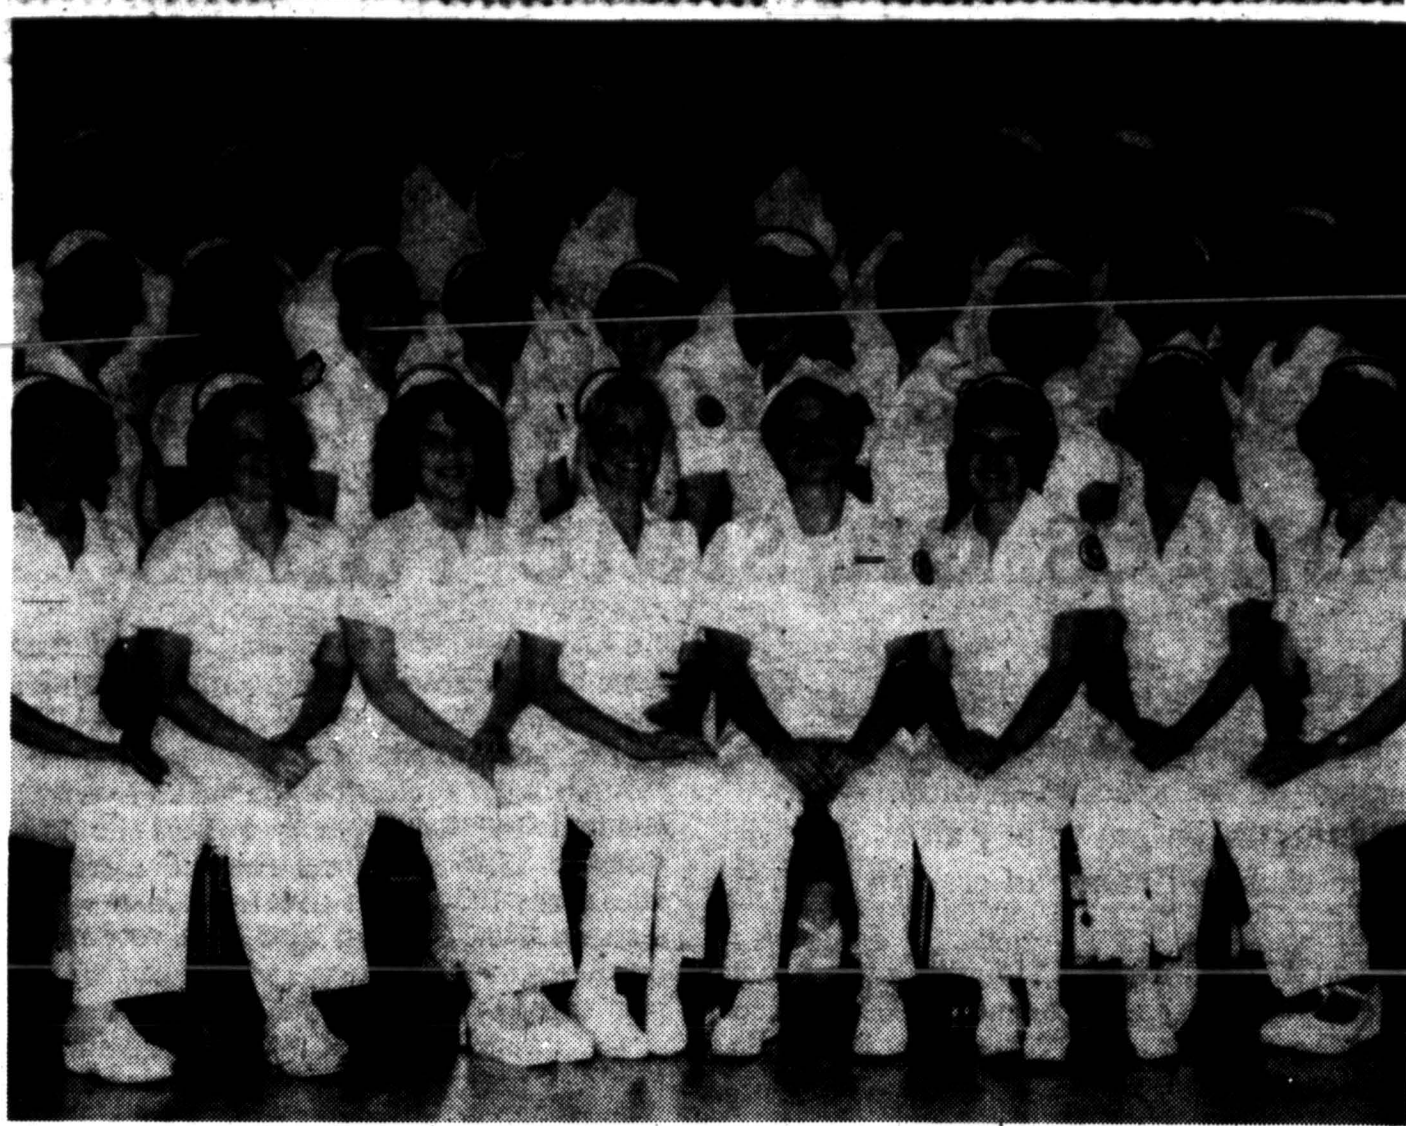

The district, however, did not incorporate that grant in the final approved financing plan. They did, however, indicate that if the separate $50,000 grant is approved then the tax assessment for property owners would be reduced from $150,000 to $100,000.

That decreased assessment would mean that a property owner would pay $5.52 rather than $8.06 per lineal foot.

Directors spent about three hours reviewing project with about 35 property owners in attendance at the public hearing.

Margaret Lidstrom from the Trail and Saddle Club asked directors to delay the vote until after a final design is approved later this summer. Several others also asked similar questions.

BOARD chairwoman Pat Bernardi explained that by law the district has to wait 88

days between the decision and the vote.

The tax assessment also must be submitted to the county auditor by Aug. 15. Even then, the district will have to float a "tax anticipation note" and pay interest to finance the project before the tax funds are distributed.

Directors also believe the best time to plant the vegetation and willows will be just before the rainy season.

It is imperative to have the election early so that there is time to complete plans and undertake the work by November.

Bernardi told the audience the design will be ready before the August election and there will be "plenty" of meetings for more discussion and information.

chestra committee and the executive board to resolve these issues. We thought we'd show a good faith effort.

"We met with them Thursday (April 25) and we talked for 20 minutes, but they didn't respond. We were forced into this recourse. This is the only way we have to show the board that we are as important as they are."

WILLIAM DOOLITTLE of Carmel, president of the symphony board of directors, said he hopes discussions can continue with the musicians.

"We're still talking to the union people to see what's behind this," Doolittle said. "We're looking for clarification of their written statement (strike notification)."

When asked whether the board of directors would be willing to reconsider its selection of Suttle and hire Kovalenko, Doolittle responded: "That depends on the circumstances."

Don Pellerin, president-administrator of Local 616, said he expected verification of the strike vote from union headquarters in New York sometime this week. When that happens, "the union will put them (symphony) on the unfair list and notify other musicians," Pellerin said.

In a written strike notification to the symphony board signed by Pellerin, Local 616 related musicians' "deep concerns regarding the issues that have divided our orchestra and the association's board."

"We also believe that we have faithfully executed the provisions of our contract... (and) that you have failed to meet and confer in a good faith effort to resolve the issues."

"We believe also that you have failed to work with orchestra members to resolve issues. In addition, your threats of suit against the union and members of the orchestra have belied your purported desire to settle the issues through dialogue.

"We deeply regret that the board has forced this action. However, we cannot allow the board to jeopardize the rich musical heritage of our community for which we have so long labored."

In an April 23 letter to the striking musicians signed by board president Doolittle, the symphony board asked them to "seriously consider setting aside your disappointment, terminating your strike and letting the wounds heal."

"What you have proposed, and are trying to implement by the strike, is equivalent to a veto power over actions taken in a lawful manner by the board majority after affording you greater input than is provided by your contract."

"The board acted in a democratic manner, deliberately, after weighing all recommendations. For it to accede to your demands would appear to be a relinquishment by the board of its legal responsibilities to direct and manage the affairs of the association. This it cannot do."

Elizabeth Pasquinelli, symphony manager, said the 36 members of the board of directors serve three-year, staggered terms. One-third of board members are replaced each year at the annual meeting, usually in June or July, she said.

Prospective board members are put forth by a nominating committee of the board, and then voted upon by other board members, according to Pasquinelli.

"It is not our policy to release the by-laws of the board of directors," Pasquinelli told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Panel asks city to limit photo processing firm

THE CARMEL Board of Adjustments — concerned that Carmel PhotoArt "gobbles" more than 800,000 gallons of water annually — has asked the city council to issue a cease and desist order that would close down its photo processing department.

Co-owner Martin Fox has responded that the order is beyond the scope of the legal authority of the city and said he doubts it will be issued by the council.

The council is not expected to review the planning commission recommendation until its regularly scheduled meeting in June because the May 7 agenda is already overpacked, according to Planning Director Diane White.

The city-PhotoArt battle has been waged ever since the business opened several years ago in the Paradise building, northeast corner of Dolores Street and Ocean Avenue.

The original PhotoArt business license is for retail sales and an art gallery. The store does sell film, but the gallery has been open only intermittently.

The majority of its business comes from its one-hour photo processing service.

The city, PhotoArt and its main competitor, Carmel Camera Center, have been embroiled in lawsuits during the past three years.

The city contends PhotoArt has violated its license because the photo processing department is its major business when the gallery and film counter should account for most of the sales.

PhotoArt claims photo processing is a retail business.

Carmel Camera Center owner David Muston has been sued by PhotoArt over his public remarks questioning the legality of the PhotoArt business. And Muston has counter-sued.

In a compromise attempt, the city and PhotoArt agreed that the business would apply for a use permit officially to legalize the photo processing.

But after months of delays over water use disputes, the board of adjustments finally took action at its April 24 session.

That afternoon, the board first denied the PhotoArt request for a use permit. But, that action merely meant that PhotoArt could continue operation as a non-conforming use.

Then board member Fred McNulty took the matter one step forward.

McNulty asserted the one-hour photo processing machine "gobbles" too much water in a city that has used about 98 percent of its existing water allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

THE CITY used 98.7 percent of its allocation of 1,030.8 ac. ft. of water in water year June 1983 to July 1984. (There are 325,851 gallons in an acre foot.)

If the allocation is exceeded, the water district can impose mandatory conservation measures on the city.

Because of the water shortage, the city already has imposed an ordinance that bans a new business if it will consume more water than the previous use.

PhotoArt uses about 800,000 gallons of water per year, according to Fox's records.

With little discussion, the board unanimously approved McNulty's motion to recommend that the council issue a "cease and desist" order to PhotoArt.

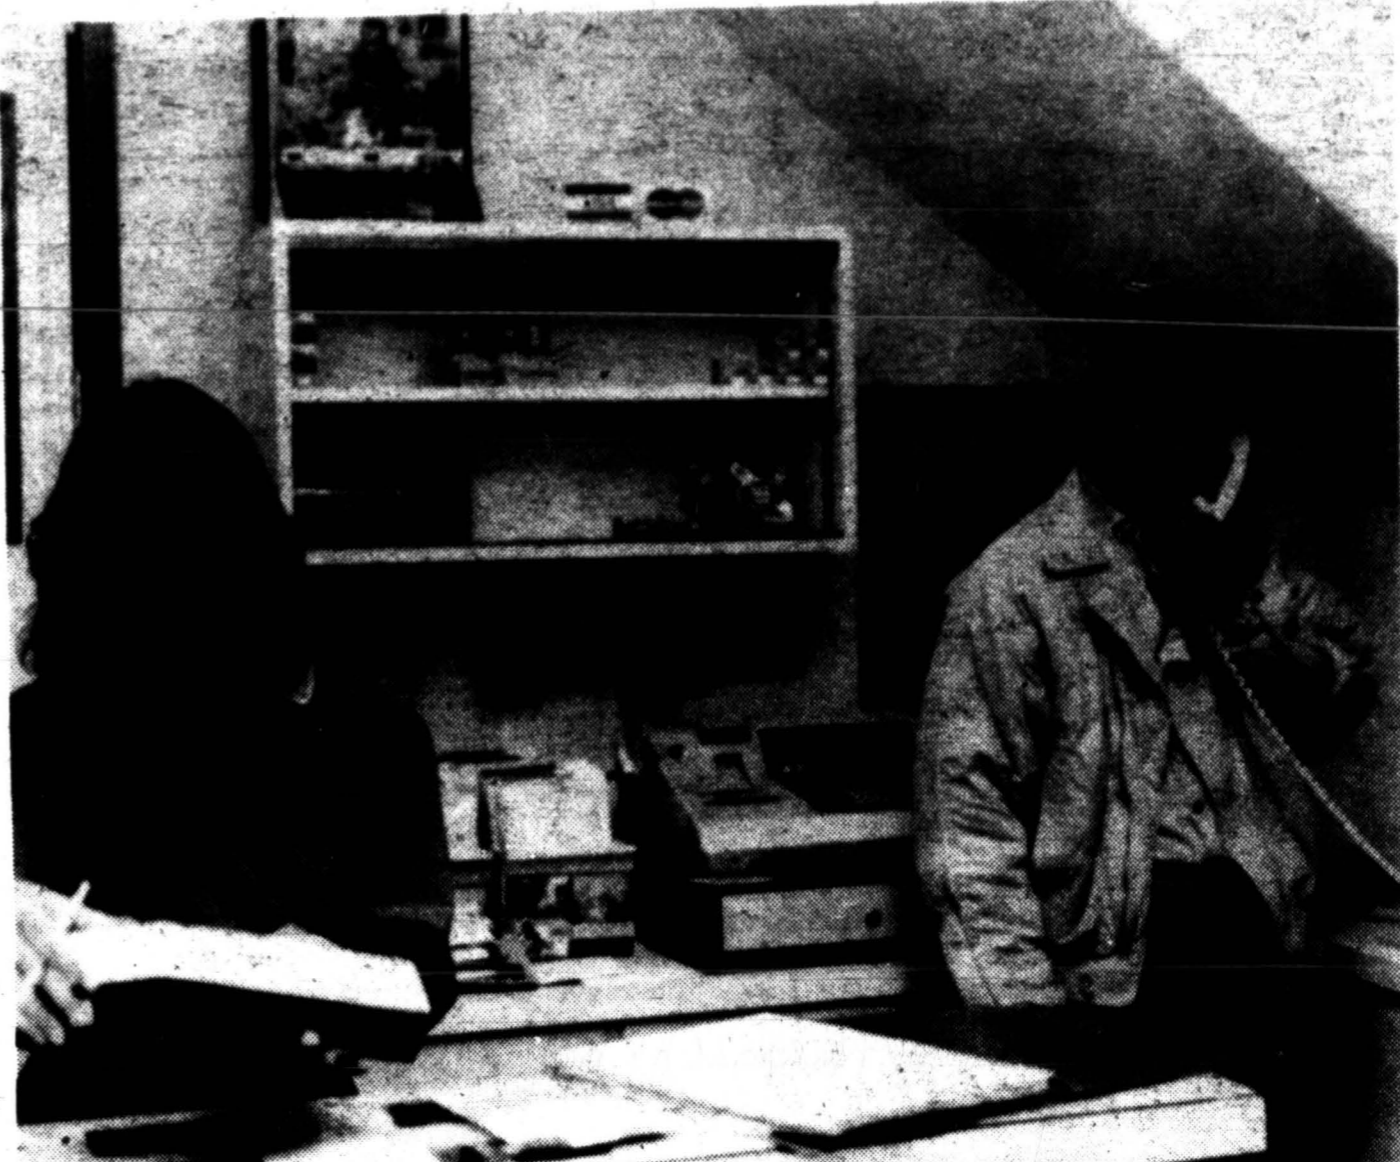

If the council adopts such a measure, the retail sales and art gallery could remain open.

After the meeting, White said she plans to talk to City Atty. Don Freeman before preparing a report to the council.

The key issue, White said, is selectivity. The question is whether the council wants to amortize all high water uses.

"I don't see how you can select out PhotoArt. You have to select out all such uses," White said.

Fox questions whether the city has the power to issue such an order against an existing business and plans to discuss the issue with attorney Hugo Gerstl of Monterey.

MARTIN FOX, above at his PhotoArt business, says he does not think the city has the legal authority to force him to close down the photo processing department. The board of adjustments wants the council to issue a cease and desist order against Fox and his photo processing. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Voters in Carmel school district can decide replacement trustees

VOTERS WHO oppose the recall of Carmel Unified School District trustees James Yates, Robert Fenton and Susan Bromfield can still help choose a replacement candidate on the July 23 ballot.

That is according to Monterey County Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood.

Underwood said voters first will be asked whether each individual trustee should be recalled.

Then the voter, no matter how he or she votes on the recall election, can cast a vote for a replacement candidate.

For example, voter Bob Smith does not want Bromfield recalled. Smith should mark the "no" box.

Then Smith looks over the field of hypothetical replacement candidates: Phil Jones and Mary Sanders.

If Smith would prefer to see Sanders on the board just in case Bromfield is recalled, then Smith should vote for Sanders in addition to marking the "no" box on the question whether Bromfield should be recalled.

However, if Smith fails to mark either a "yes" or "no" on the recall question for each trustee, then the ballot is disqualified, Underwood explained.

Current announced candidates for the positions and which trustee they will challenge are: Hilton Bialek (Susan Bromfield), Claudia Daniels (Jim Yates) and Pat Herro (Robert Fenton).

May 16 is the deadline to file as a candidate for election.

Carmel may take stand as nuclear free zone

CARMEL MAY become another in a growing list of "nuclear free zone" cities.

The city council is to discuss a resolution that proclaims nuclear weapons off limits within the city when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, May 7 in the Bingham Room at Sunset Center.

The council briefly discussed the issue in March when Councilman David Maradei presented a draft ordinance to ban all nuclear weapons from the city.

But the draft ordinance drew the ire of fellow Councilmen James Wright and Robert Stephenson.

"I think it's a mistake for the council to put this on the agenda," Wright said.

Wright, a retired naval officer, said he does not think the city council is elected to become involved in national politics.

"I object to it. I think it's inappropriate. It's basically a political statement," Wright said.

Stephenson added: "I agree with Jim. This is just political."

But Maradei called the draft ordinance part of a "grass roots campaign" to demonstrate opposition to nuclear war.

Maradei also pointed out that the draft ordinance would prohibit the transportation or storage of nuclear weapons in Carmel.

"If all the cities and county did it, we wouldn't have it in Carmel or Monterey County," Maradei said.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend sided with Maradei.

"We've got to have control. Gosh, it's a question of survival," she said.

The council chose to continue consideration of the draft ordinance until May.

As a compromise, the draft ordinance since has been revamped into a resolution, which states basically the same sentiment but is not binding by law.

In other action May 7, the council is to consider:

- The mayor's appointments to the planning commission. Gene Cava has applied for reappointment and Fred McNulty has resigned for "personal reasons."

- Whether to adopt a position on a proposed rate increase for California-American Water Co., which wants to raise residential bills by about $5 monthly.

- The awarding of a bid for an approximately $15,000 computer system for Sunset Center.

BUSINESS BEAT

BY NANCY HILLS

A last-minute flurry

CARMEL regulatory panels gave approvals to several businesses in a now-routine, last-minute flurry of activity April 24 and 25.

The Carmel Board of Adjustments met Wednesday, April 24 and the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board met Thursday, April 25 at Sunset Center.

BOOK STORE CHANGES HANDS

The How to Do Anything Bookstore in the Lobos Lodge on Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street has had a change of hands and will have a change of merchandise.

The board of adjustments accepted the recommendation of the land use committee that the new owner, Sally Lasater, be allowed to sell and rent how-to and educational videos in the bookstore.

Lasater was required to ask for permission to sell and rent the videos because the bookstore is designated a non-conforming use since it is a retail store located in a service commercial zone.

For those not up on their use permit and non-conforming use restrictions, a legal non-conforming use — a business that was established before the present zoning code and would no longer be permitted to open in that zone — is not allowed to expand or change unless the change is toward a reduction of the intensity of that use.

Lasater was originally told by Carmel Planning Director Diane White that the videos would not be allowed. However, Lasater and the owners of How to Do Anything appealed to the land use committee with the argument that videos are not out of character with the bookstore since they are the same as books, only in a different form.

"Videocassettes are being sold in bookstores throughout the country," Lasater wrote in a letter to the board of adjustment.

The majority of the members of the land use committee agreed with her argument and recommended approval of her request with the condition that the videos be limited to how-to or educational tapes and that the videos not make up more than 10 percent of the total gross receipts or 10 percent of the floor space.

In an extremely carefully worded discussion, board member Gene Cava inquired about the availability of material not suited to certain ages but Lasater defused the concern with a point-blank: "There will be no X-rated."

Lasater said she first became acquainted with the public interest in how-to videos as the national sales manager of a video distribution company that specializes in equestrian videos called, appropriately enough, The Equestrian Library.

"What I learned is that people really want to learn something and not just be entertained," she said.

After working for about a year and a half for Equestrian, Lasater said she is ready to get into a local business where she can stay closer to home.

The books will not be neglected because of the tapes.

"I will be doubling the book inventory — with new titles," Lasater said.

About the videos, Lasater said that she believes that television has "not been used for what its best purpose is — education" and that videos are an excellent way to change that.

"I have found over a thousand titles of how-to and educational videos," she added. Now she must start the process of choosing which ones to select. Lasater said that she had come across such videos as cooking lessons by Julia Child, celestial navigation by William F. Buckley, how to invest in the stock market by Forbes magazine, and all those workout tapes. She also will carry the equestrian videos from The Equestrian Library, she said.

The sale will hopefully be final, Lasater said, on May 24.

SALLY LASATER is in the process of purchasing the How to Do Anything Bookstore on Ocean Avenue and will be bringing how-to and educational videos into the store for sale or rental.

The present owners Carmel Valley residents Jo and Ralph Moller plan to retire and enjoy themselves, said Jo Moller.

Yours at the board of adjustments session. The shop would sell, according to the business license, "personalized lucite/acrylic gift items."

Babigian wanted his gift shop to go into Ilona's space on San Carlos Street near Ocean Avenue.

The use permit was denied because, though both shops are listed as gift shops, Ilona's has what Diane White called "clothes and fabrics with gift items" while Personally Yours has what is described by the staff as "items of an impulse nature." The conclusion was that Carmel was "oversupplied with gift stores providing such merchandise."

"I don't understand what I would have to sell in order to qualify," Babigian, who owns a similar store in Fresno, told the board of adjustments. Board member Gene Hammond said the sale of these types of items were "against everything the land use committee and general plan stand for."

Ilona Gilmore, owner of Ilona's, said she was not really selling the store that she had had for seven years but that Babigian, a personal friend, had made an offer that was contingent on the city's decision on the use permit. Her business, she said, would remain in its place and in business.

Since it had been determined that Personally Yours needed a use permit of its own to operate rather than operating as a continuation of an existing business and that permit was denied, the request for a business license was automatically withdrawn.

VILLAGE INN LICENSE GRANTED

In a turnabout of the usual procedure, J. Peter Hanson received his business license for the Village Inn motel he bought last December. His application for a business license was delayed while the city deliberates the outcome of the Carmel Sands motel demolition.

The owners of the Carmel Sands motel, the Little family, have asked the city to allow them to tear down the Sands complex on the corner of San Carlos and Fifth Avenue and rebuild it.

The request has caused the city to look closely at its policies regarding use permits of existing businesses. The determination the city must make that has affected the Village Inn application, Diane White said, is whether the ordinance passed in August of 1984 intended that a use permit would be given to an existing business that could never be conforming. The Village Inn (and other motels) do not meet the one unit per 1,000 sq. ft. and one parking space per unit.

Because of the time involved in making that determination, the city allowed Hanson to get his business license before he was able to request a use permit.

Hanson said he believes only 5 percent of the present motels in Carmel could meet those standards.

"If they want to prevent growth — fine, but I think that the motels here now should be grandfathered in," Hanson said.

NO PERMIT, BUT LICENSE APPROVED

Lockwood Antiques, in the Stonehouse Terrace on San Carlos and Seventh Avenue in the former location of Upstairs Selections, did not get a use permit April 24, but was granted its business license the next day at the business license board meeting.

The reason for the denial of the use permit was that the city is oversupplied with antique dealers and "granting a use permit would legitimize the existing use and would encourage the continued imbalance of land uses which fails to provide for the daily needs of the residents," according to a staff report.

The ruling has become a familiar one to applicants for use permits for antique stores. The denial of the use permit, however, in no way hampered Lockwood Antiques business license because the location was previously an antique shop.

The shop is managed by J. Douglas Smith, who formerly worked for Gorham's Antiques until it closed three years ago. Smith also owned his own shop — J. Douglas Antiques. He sold that shop to the owners of Upstairs Selections and began to manage Lockwood Antiques when Glyn Lockwood, a retired industrialist who "loves antiques," purchased Upstairs Selections.

The shop carries 18th and 19th century English and American antiques and "a few Oriental pieces," Smith said. We did not get much time to chat, however, since Smith was trying to unload 600 new pieces that had just arrived.

After three tries, the Personalized Touch has received its business license — but don't be looking for it. The name has been changed to Carmel Motoring Company.

The shop originally had been planned as an outlet for owner Gregory Schafer's engraving business, Carmel Engraving. When that ran into trouble because of its gift-style merchandise, Schafer changed it to an auto accessory shop.

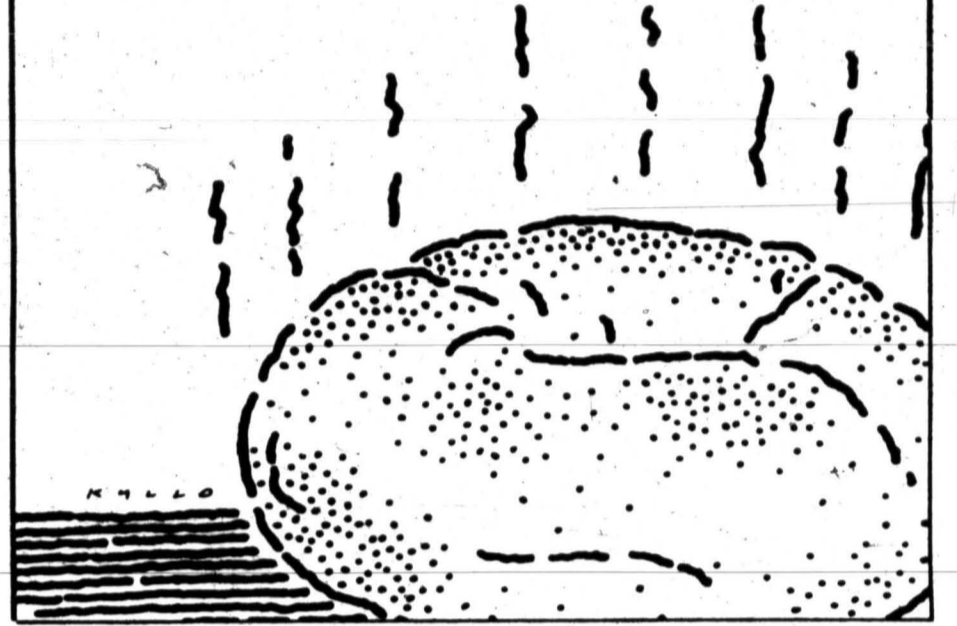

Schafer supplied the business license board with a list of merchandise he plans to provide in the new store. The list received some scrutiny and comments from board members.

Board member Dorrie Hammond inquired about waxes, polishing agents, pin striping and tires. The manager of the new shop, Deen Rowe, assured her it would not carry anything flammable and that the pin striping kits were not paint but plastic strips.

Schafer said the tires probably would be a special order item since there is no room in the store for them. Satisfied when Diane White said that though the list was more extensive than previously indicated, all items were in the auto accessory classification, the board granted Schafer his license.

Carmel Garden Club plans events for GCA delegates

THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea Garden Club plans a series of tours and special events for delegates to the national meeting of the Garden Club of America who will visit the Monterey Peninsula May 16-17.

The delegates will come to Carmel and the peninsula after their session in San Francisco. The locally sponsored tour is limited to 43 persons, according to club member Betty Guilfoil.

"Among the activities planned for the visit to the Monterey Peninsula are tours of gardens in Pebble Beach and Carmel, a visit to Piccadilly Park, a tour of the Monterey Bay Aquarium and a visit to Big Sur," Guilfoil said.

The national delegates are to be welcomed to the Monterey Peninsula by Mrs. Clyn Smith of Carmel, club president.

The delegates are to arrive in Pebble Beach by bus from San Francisco at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 16 and visit the garden of Mrs. Arthur Devlin on 17 Mile Drive. They will have luncheon at noon at The Beach and Tennis Club where Julie Packard of the Monterey Bay Aquarium will be featured speaker. That evening, they will dine at La Playa with members of the local club and their spouses.

THE MONTEREY County Symphony Guild celebrated a fund-raising "Play Day" Sunday, April 28 at Pebble Beach. The day started with a luncheon picnic at Stillwater Cove and included golf, tennis, croquet, dominoes, dinner and dancing. Among the assembled guests at the luncheon were (from left) Ken Schley of Pacific Grove, past president of the symphony association; Gene Andrews, of Pebble Beach, incoming Guild president; Jane Roland of Monterey, Guild president; Bill Doolittle of Carmel, symphony association president.

At 9 a.m. Friday, May 17 the delegates are to visit the Carmel gardens of Mrs. Ernest Singleton, Thomas Stratton and Gordon Jackson. At 11 a.m., they will board a bus to visit the Big Sur gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Foster.

They will have luncheon at 1 p.m. at Ventana in Big Sur, and at 3 p.m. inspect Piccadilly Park in Carmel. At 7 p.m., the delegates will be entertained at dinner parties in the Pebble Beach homes of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stewart, Paul Woudenberg, Alexander Blackhall, Clarke Bearden, Hugh Chatham and Mrs. Justin Dart.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, founded in 1979, is not affiliated with the Garden Club of America although many members of the local club also belong to the national organization.

SERRA SCHOOL PLANS SPAGHETTI DINNER

Junipero Serra School at the Carmel Mission will sponsor its annual spaghetti dinner from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 5. Tickets will be available at the door at $5 for adults and $3 for children.

Live entertainment, a drawing for a Hawaiian vacation and door prizes will be featured. The public is invited.

ANNA BROWN PLACES IN MATH CONTEST

Anna Brown, daughter of Margaret Brown of Carmel, recently placed eighth out of 140 students in the Northern California Mathcounts Contest for seventh and eighth graders.

She is an eighth grade student at York School of Monterey. The competition, sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers, was part of the state-wide Mathcounts Contest.

Guild stages 'Play Day'

GATHERED at the Beach and Tennis Club for wine after the "Play Day" matches in Pebble Beach were (top) Stephen Henderson and Susan Faber of Carmel; (middle) Nicky and Don Boston of Pacific Grove; (bottom) Bob Gay of Carmel Valley and Cimarron Conway of Carmel.

SUPERVISORS HONOR LOCAL VOLUNTEERS

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors recognized Carmel and Carmel Valley residents April 23 for their public service to county citizens.

Capt. and Mrs. James Webster of Carmel Valley were recognized for their contribution of more than 2,500 hours of service to Carmel Valley Library.

And Patricia Priestly of Carmel was recognized for her intern work with the Monterey County Department of Probation.

DON BUTTS of Carmel Valley (right), president of the Mzuri Wildlife Foundation, presented a check for $3,000 last week to Mas Yokogawa, president of the Carmel River Steelhead Association, to assist efforts to find a nurturing pond in Carmel Valley. Each year, the fishermen's group rescues thousands of steelhead from the dying Carmel River and feeds them while they grow in a nurturing tank, but finding a suitable location has proven a challenge this year. The group hopes to raise 20,000 fish this year. The grant from the non-profit Mzuri Wildlife Foundation will help defray costs of the project. (Michael Gardner photo.)

CHURCH OF WAYFARER RUMMAGE SALE

The Methodist Women of the Church of the Wayfarer have planned their annual rummage sale from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 4 in Fellowship Hall at the corner of Seventh Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel.

The sale will include household items, small appliances, furniture, jewelry, books, toys, sporting goods, linens, picture frames and clothing. Special items will be featured in a boutique auction.

A day-long snack bar will feature homemade soups, lasagne, chicken tortillas and pies. United Methodist Women help to support such programs as Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, Meals on Wheels, YMCA, YWCA, Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula and The Salvation Army.

G.O.P WOMEN CELEBRATE 35TH ANNIVERSARY

Nostalgia was the theme of the 35th anniversary tea of the Carmel Republican Women's Club Wednesday, April 24 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Owens of Carmel Valley.

NINETY-ONE-year-old co-founder of the Carmel Republican Women's Club Dorothy Green displayed the hat she wore to the polls in previous elections. (Donna Marek photo.)

About 100 members and guests wore hats and gloves in keeping with the theme, and spent the afternoon with several past presidents of the club.

Ninety-one-year-old club co-founder Dorothy Green Chapman — who has lived in Carmel since 1933 — was honored for her many years of service.

"When you join an organization and before you assume any responsible position, make sure you read the bylaws first," she said before she displayed the hat she wore during previous elections.

Special tribute also was paid to several club presidents who served during the 1950s — Virginia Stanton (1952-3), Rudy Holt (1954-5), Hope Raggett (1956), Beverly Brownell (1957), and Jean Thomas (1958 and 1960).

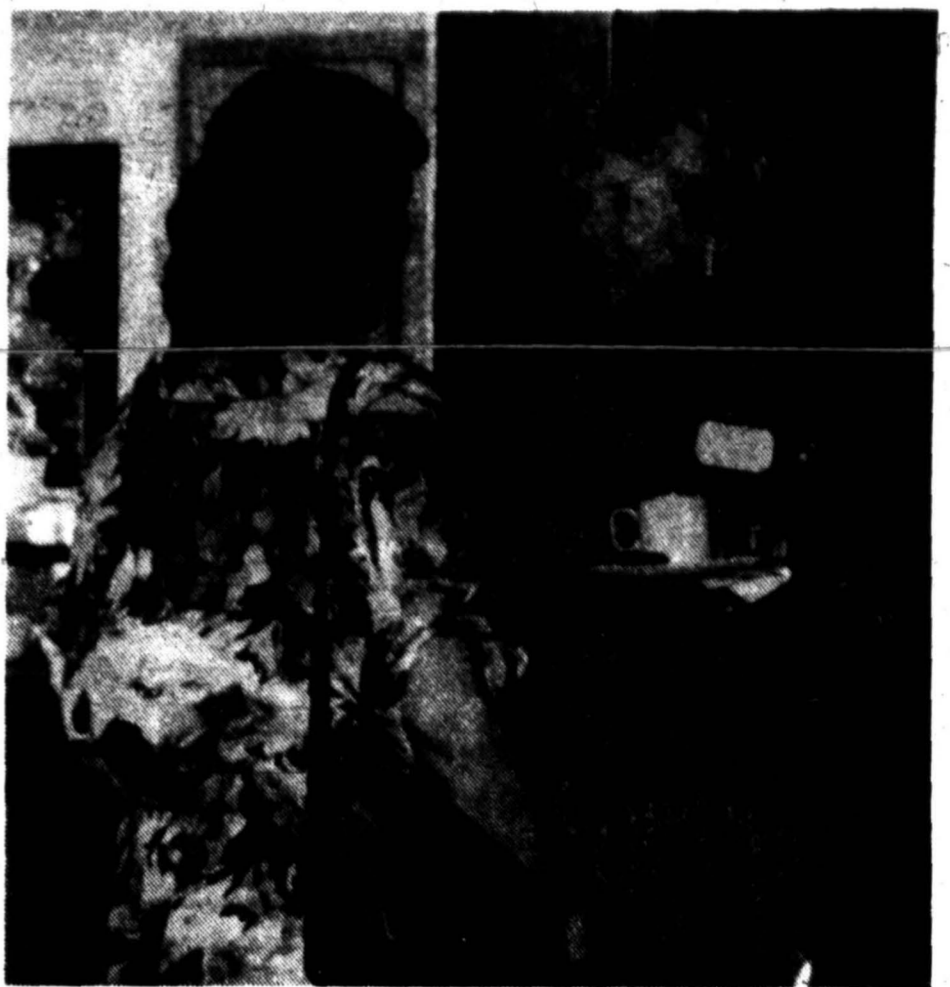

LOCALS PARTICIPATE IN HANDICAPPED OLYMPICS

Ken Bizzini of Carmel Valley was one of many clients of Handicapped Activities Unlimited who participated in the 10th Annual Monterey County Special Olympics Saturday, April 20 at Monterey Peninsula College.

And Steve Arena — also from Carmel Valley — attended the games to cheer for his friends, according to Carolyn Becker, executive director of Handicapped Activities. The non-profit daytime activities center in Pacific Grove has been in operation since 1965.

CARMEL HERITAGE SPRING PARTY MAY 5

Carmel Heritage plans its spring party from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, May 5 at the Mission Ranch Barn.

Guest of honor will be cartoonist Gus ("Gordo") Arriola of Carmel. Arriola is to discourse on, among other things, "the mysteries of Mexican timing, the care and feeding of the siesta, manana and other Mexican traditions now practiced in Carmel," according to Al Smith of Carmel Heritage.

Members of Carmel Heritage and guests are invited. For reservations, call 624-8319 or 624-3861.

TOR HOUSE GARDEN PARTY IS SATURDAY

Hawk Tower, home of the late poet Robinson Jeffers, with its English-style garden will be open to the public from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 4.

The Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation will provide docents to conduct tours and answer questions. Tor House is located at 26304 Ocean View Ave., Carmel.

Admission of $7.50 includes refreshments. Tickets will be available at the gate.

5TH DISTRICT REPORT

BY D. W. MADDIX

Poverty services decided

IF EVER man has devised a reasonable facsimile of perpetual motion, the process of government is surely it.

Just last month the Monterey County Community Services Commission concluded deliberations on services for the 1985 fiscal year, only to begin immediately planning anti-poverty programs for 1986.

Fortunately, we do have some plans, outlined below, but it is important to remember that these ideas are tentative and subject to change upon consultation with interested citizens.

To that end the commission will conduct a public hearing on the 1986 local plan at the Hebron Heights community center in Salinas at 6 p.m. May 8. At that meeting, the commission will discuss, and amend if necessary, the following program ideas.

INFORMATION AND REFERRAL SERVICES

A prime function of community services — mandated by law — is to gather and disseminate information about those services available to low-income people. We use the information to refer eligible persons to the appropriate public and private agencies. This effort has proven so useful in the past that the commission plans to recommend an expenditure of $50,000 for these services in 1986. We are considering four specific plans.

- TRUCHA: Community services has an ongoing contract with TRUCHA to serve the Hispanic community, largely on the peninsula. They have years of experience in the field, and perform the service effectively.

- SOUTH COUNTY: The area of Monterey County south of Salinas and the peninsula is by far the largest and the least urbanized geographical area of the county, yet it is woefully underserved by anti-poverty programs. The CSC realizes the need to extend its reach to this huge area, and we have allocated tentatively $15,000 to fund agencies willing and able to address this goal.

- REFUGEE SERVICES. CSC intends to sustain this year's effort to assimilate into our community the approximately 6,000 Indochinese refugees currently living in the county. The continuing success of these programs is their best recommendation.

- HOUSING ASSISTANCE PROGRAM: In our relatively affluent area, the availability of affordable housing is a fundamental problem. The Reagan administration has terminated all housing construction programs, so our goal here is to compile a current listing of low-income housing units.

CHILDCARE PROGRAMS

This need will not go away. As recent changes in the economy have forced hundreds of thousands of families below the poverty line, the children have suffered, particularly in single-parent households. The CSC will propose several programs in an attempt to deal with the problem in 1986.

- EMERGENCY SHELTERS: CSC currently funds child care services at two shelters for victims of family abuse, and we propose an expenditure of about $17,000 to continue this funding next year.

- LAS LOMAS CHILD CARE: This opportunity is more prospective in nature, as no facility in that area now exists. Still, the need exists in the north county area, and we are trying to extend our services to that chronically underserved area.

- SUMMER RECREATION: Such programs for disadvantaged youths are virtually nonexistent. CSC will expend no more than $8,000 in 1986 for the entire county. All proposals for summer recreation services are welcome, but it would be unrealistic to expect much.

- SALVATION ARMY: The Salvation Army removes children from unhealthy environments and exposes them to a little culture. Art exhibits, parks and museums are on the agenda for this child care program. CSC has funded other Salvation Army projects, and their results have been satisfactory.

These child care programs will be a staple of community services activities for the foreseeable future. They must be, for the social problem they address is immense. For this reason, the CSC helps to sponsor a public forum to air the difficulties faced by newly impoverished women and children.

The title of the conference is the "Feminization of Poverty." This broad term tries to encompass a body of contemporary economic ills visited disproportionately — some say unfairly, some say unlawfully — upon women and children.

The dissolution of traditional families through divorce has left children, almost always, in the custody of their mothers who often must try to support them on the low wages generally available in the pink-collar job market.

These new single-parent families, together with elderly women in poverty, comprise more than two-thirds of the low-income population in this country.

Some of our local politicians (Sen. Henry Mello, Assemblyman Sam Farr, among others) will discuss the matter at length Saturday, April 27, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Salinas Community Center, 940 N. Main St.

The Commission on the Status of Women will co-sponsor the event, and everyone is welcome who can pay a fee of $5 for the lunch. Call 422-4344 for details.

(D.W. Maddox, a resident of Rippling River in Carmel Valley, is Fifth District representative to the Monterey County Community Services Commission).

OBITUARIES

Matt Ryan Smith

A prayer service took place April 22 at El Estero Chapel of Mission Mortuary for Matt Ryan Smith, a third-generation forester who died April 18 at his home in Carmel. He was 84.

Born Feb. 18, 1901 in Chicago, Ill., he graduated from Harvard in 1924 and was a member of the crew team. He was an Army veteran of World War I who fought in the trenches in France.

He spent his early life in the family timber business and worked in Oregon and Washington as well as California, and served for 15 years on the Carmel Forestry Commission from 1968. He was involved in the establishment of mini-parks in Carmel and in the planning of a walkway along Scenic Drive.

He was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

He is survived by his wife Louise of Carmel; two sons, John of Weed and Richard of Sunnyvale; daughter Suzi Powers of Concord; sister Ethel Robison of Walla Walla, Wash.; and five grandchildren.

Entombment took place at San Carlos Cemetery in Monterey with the Mission Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Roger Bailey

Private cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Roger Bailey, architect and watercolorist who died April 20 at Marin County Hospital after he suffered a heart attack in Mill Valley while visiting friends. He was 87.

Born Oct. 3, 1897 in Bradford, Pa., he lived in Pebble Beach for the past 10 years. He retired in 1969 after a career as an award-winning architect and widely-exhibited artist.

He served as a second lieutenant in the Army during World War I. He graduated from Cornell University in 1920 and studied and traveled in Europe from 1922-25 as the holder of the Paris Prize at L'Ecole des Beaux Arts.

He was co-winner with Eric Gugler of a nationwide competition for design of the Chicago War Memorial in 1930, and in 1932 was appointed professor of architecture at the University of Michigan. From 1936-38 he took leave from Michigan to teach at Yale and Cornell.

He was appointed to the University of Utah faculty in 1949 and served as dean until 1963. He was licensed in architecture in New York, Michigan and Utah and was a fellow of the American Institute of Architects.

Samples of his watercolor paintings are in the collection of the Utah Fine Arts Museum in Salt Lake City, the Legion of Honor Museum in San Francisco, and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. He was a member of the building committee of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art in 1979.

Survivors include his wife Elizabeth of Pebble Beach, and two sisters, Mrs. Leonard D. Snyder and Mrs. Ernest D. Leet, both of Jamestown, N.Y.

The family suggests memorial contributions to

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Marjorie Heiner

Memorial services took place April 28 at Carmel Valley Manor for Marjorie Cooper Heiner, a Monterey Peninsula resident since 1963 who died April 26 at the Carmel Valley Manor medical unit.

Born in New Bern, N.C., she was a member of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church. Her husband John, a captain in the Coast Guard, died in 1982.

Survivors include two daughters, Joan Webster of Kawkawlin, Mich., and Marjorie Bartlett of Madison, Wis.; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. Inurnment was scheduled at Golden Gate National Cemetery in San Bruno. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to a charity of the donor's choice.

Betty Hutchison

Betty A. Hutchison, a longtime resident of Carmel, died April 23 at her home. She was 66.

Born May 16, 1918 in San Jose, she spent summers at the family home on Santa Fe Street when she was a child. She and her husband, the late Robert J. Hutchison, moved to Carmel in 1949. She was an active supporter of the Girl Scouts and the Carmel Youth Center.

Survivors include her son Michael of Carmel Valley; her daughter Vicki Ann Hutchison of San Francisco; and sister, Coralie Hill Fellows of Menlo Park.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Friends of the Sea Otter, The Barnyard, Carmel, Calif. 93923.

David Lloyd

Private family services took place for David P.C. Lloyd of Carmel Valley, a neurophysiologist who died April 20 at Community Hospital. He was 73.

Born Sept. 22, 1911 in Auburn, Ala., he spent seven years of his childhood in Carmel and returned here for summers during his college years. He moved to Carmel Valley two years ago to be near his brother, the late Frank Lloyd of Carmel.

He received a bachelor of science degree at McGill University, Montreal, in 1932 and attended McGill Medical School until he was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship to study physiology at Trinity College, Oxford University, England, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees and doctor of science and doctor of philosophy degrees.

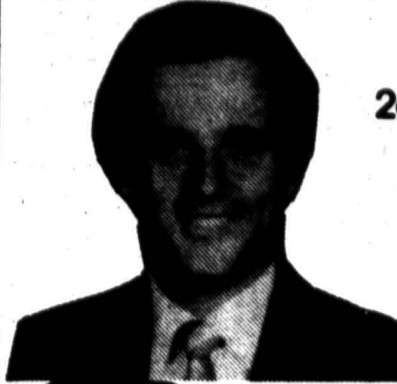

He received many awards for his work in biology, physiology and medicine.

Survivors include his daughter Dr. Marion Lloyd Talbot of Anchorage, Alaska; two sons, Owen of Brockton, Mass., and Evan of Ellicott City, Md.; four grandchildren, a nephew and three nieces.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL

BY MSGR. FRANCES WEBER

Confirmation controversy

THE so-called "confirmation controversy" was long a source of agitation to Fray Junipero Serra and the other missionaries in Alta California.

Worse than that, it infringed on the spiritual welfare of the neophytes because it threatened to deprive them of the sacrament.

By virtue of the patronato real, papal briefs issued in favor of New Spain required the royal pase before they could be implemented. In addition, the viceroy or his delegate also enjoyed the privilege of issuing the pase in his designated territory.

Governor Felipe de Neve was not unwilling to affix his pase to the document from Pope Clement XIV authorizing him to confirm, but Serra did not have in hand the document. It was at the Franciscan headquarters in Mexico City.

The presidente and the governor held several lengthy conferences about the issue, but the governor insisted that he had to comply with the directives of issuing the pase only on presentation of the official documents.

Throughout this entire case, neither Serra nor the officials at San Fernando College ever brought up the question as to whether a papal document treating purely spiritual things actually depended on the royal pase for its use and execution. Had such an argument been used, the missionary work might have been greatly hampered.

The friars had to fit their activity into the strong regalism of the 18th century if they wished to accomplish anything at all. They were consistently careful that all the negotiations were conducted in a friendly manner. It was a battle of wits over the interpretation of the patronato.

Serra's conscience was clear. He confirmed by the delegated authority of the pope. Hence the confirmations he conferred were valid and licit. As far as the royal patronage was concerned, Serra at no time denied that it applied, but he maintained that its demands had been met.

The presidente also used the practical argument that spiritual damage and scandal would result if he ceased to confirm. It was a delicate situation. Had he been hot-headed and loose of tongue, he might have stirred up trouble among the people. He was careful to be prudent, lest the disagreement leak out to them.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

America's seniors account for a significant percentage of the prescription drugs taken in this country, but they also account for a large proportion of the prescription drugs NOT taken. A host of recent surveys have all shown that shocking numbers of people either don't take or take improperly, the drugs prescribed for them. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration estimates that between 30 and 50 percent of patients deviate far enough from their prescribed treatment to hinder its effectiveness or jeopardize their health. For your own health and safety, follow the directions on your prescriptions to the letter and continue to follow them until your doctor advises you otherwise.

You're never too old to benefit from exercise: Dr. James Hagberg of Washington University put volunteers — average age 63 — through an intensive program of walking and running. After six months the volunteers had regained some of their previously lost heart-lung efficiency and, within a year, their blood fat levels had dropped.

Marine labs play cupid to rare shellfish

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE WIND-WHIPPED site near Soberanes Point where Granite Canyon and the Pacific Ocean meet hardly seems the place for a nursery.

But when you enter the becalmed confines of the Marine Culture Laboratory, its rows of tanks and troughs suggest exactly that.

One day each year the California Department of Fish and Game invites the public to inspect this project designed to boost — as trout are in fresh water — dwindling populations of abalone, scallop and clam. This year open house is scheduled 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 4.

Visitors who already have visited the Monterey Bay Aquarium may recognize the layout of the laboratory. They will see the inside of a working lab, with its settling tanks, constant temperature room and bubbling beakers of sterile sea water.

Still in the remodeling stages is the Marine Pollution Studies Laboratory, soon to be the site of testing of the long-term effects of municipal waste effluent and chemical contaminants on the marine environment.

Staff biologists and student interns will be available Saturday to answer questions about the plants, animals and projects that are the focus of year-round research at the ocean-bordered laboratory.

"There's always a battle for me to keep my hands wet," said laboratory director and senior marine biologist Earl Ebert.

One of three staff biologists, Ebert must sandwich his research between administrative duties. "I have to spend about five hours a day behind a desk — the paperwork is tremendous."

Due to their relative rarity and market demand, the stellar shellfish at the Marine Culture Laboratory are abalone, both red and pink varieties. A walk between the holding tanks turns up abalones as small as single grains of sand to two-inch, clearly recognizable "adult" sizes. The abalones are the sea. Most are laboratory grown.

"Right now, 90 percent of our project is abalone enhancement," Ebert noted. "A commercial fisherman receives for red abalone about $110 a dozen; for pinks around $60 to $70 and for black, $40 to $50."

"Otters, pollution and poaching have caused the abalone population to decline more than 80 percent in the past 10 years," he said.

REGULATORY methods are stringent when applied to harvesting abalone. Bag limits are low, licenses difficult to come by. Ebert admitted it's difficult to police or even estimate the number of abalone poachers.

"In the absence of the sea otter, the abalone population came to flourish. Fish and Game takes the stand, why can't we have both, but not together at the same time and place? An otter eats two tons of shellfish a year. That's a lot of shellfish."

Ebert said it is the priority of the laboratory to rebuild California's abalone population, threatened by pollution, otters, poachers and hungry oysters.

"Zoning legislation, we feel, is a serious approach — having sea otters over a limited geographical range and abalones in another," he said. Citing oyster and carp culture in the far east, Ebert said, "I envision a day when all our commercial abalones will be farmed products."

The Marine Culture Laboratory employs mariculture, or sea farming, to cultivate valuable shellfish on a pilot-production scale. Their test methods are designed to assist in fishery enhancement.

There are already three private abalone hatcheries in California, he said, and each employs methods pioneered at the Marine Culture Laboratory. Abalone served at peninsula restaurants, he added, are grown at these commercial hatcheries.

Farming the sea, or at least the laboratory tanks, is the job of marine biologist Jim Houk. Characteristic of all the work at the lab is its highly experimental nature. While Houk is thoroughly grounded in the life cycle of the abalone, a multitude of mariculture questions remain unanswered.

"We're doing a lot of work on refining techniques for fastest growth and highest survival," he said. "We don't know yet what size is best for transplanting. We compare abalone from different areas. We've collected wild from as far north as Ukiah and as far south as San Diego. We need to know if transplanting abalone in different areas will have an adverse effect."

THE YOUNG abalone feed on diatoms, or single-cell plants that resemble gelatinous brown sludge when raised in tanks under Houk's watchful eye.

Larger abs are later "weaned over" to giant kelp which Houk gathers once a week in Monterey Bay or waters just off the lab.

"We held about 800 abalone for the Monterey Bay Aquarium for a year," Houk observed. "They brought us seaweed. We have a very good relationship with them," he said of the privately built aquarium on Cannery Row in Monterey.

The abalone visitors will observe Saturday eventually will be transplanted to the Palos Verdes Peninsula in Southern California, to help rebuild diminished stocks.

"We would like to transplant once a month, but we only do it about twice a year," he added.

If abalone still harbor biological mysteries, so do the other subjects of study at the lab, Pismo clams and speckled bay scallops. The larvae of these bivalves are so susceptible to infection, a constant temperature room is maintained at the lab.

Its heavy door seals off air, seawater and nutrients that are kept germ-free to help support finicky shellfish.

Speckled bay scallops were thought lost since the 1950s until they began to reappear in Southern California waters last year. Now fully protected, the scallops are the focus of a spawning project overseen by biologist Art Haseltine.

"These were once native from Elkhorn Slough to Baja California," Haseltine said. "This is the first attempt at spawning in a lab. I suspect the conditions for spawning and culturing are similar to other coast scallops."

Haseltine pampers some 250 speckled bay scallops collected in a Southern California lagoon. He said the bivalves show good mariculture potential because they're fast growing. If they take root in the lab, they can be replanted in areas that were once their native habitat.

Research assistant John Hunt is a graduate student working with the Marine Bioassay

"Pollution is a major threat to the marine environment. The Marine Culture Laboratory is a project which specializes in research and development of a low-priority program."

Project through the Marine Pollution Studies Laboratory. The pollution studies lab is in the throes of remodeling, so visitors will see only the shell of the facility Saturday.

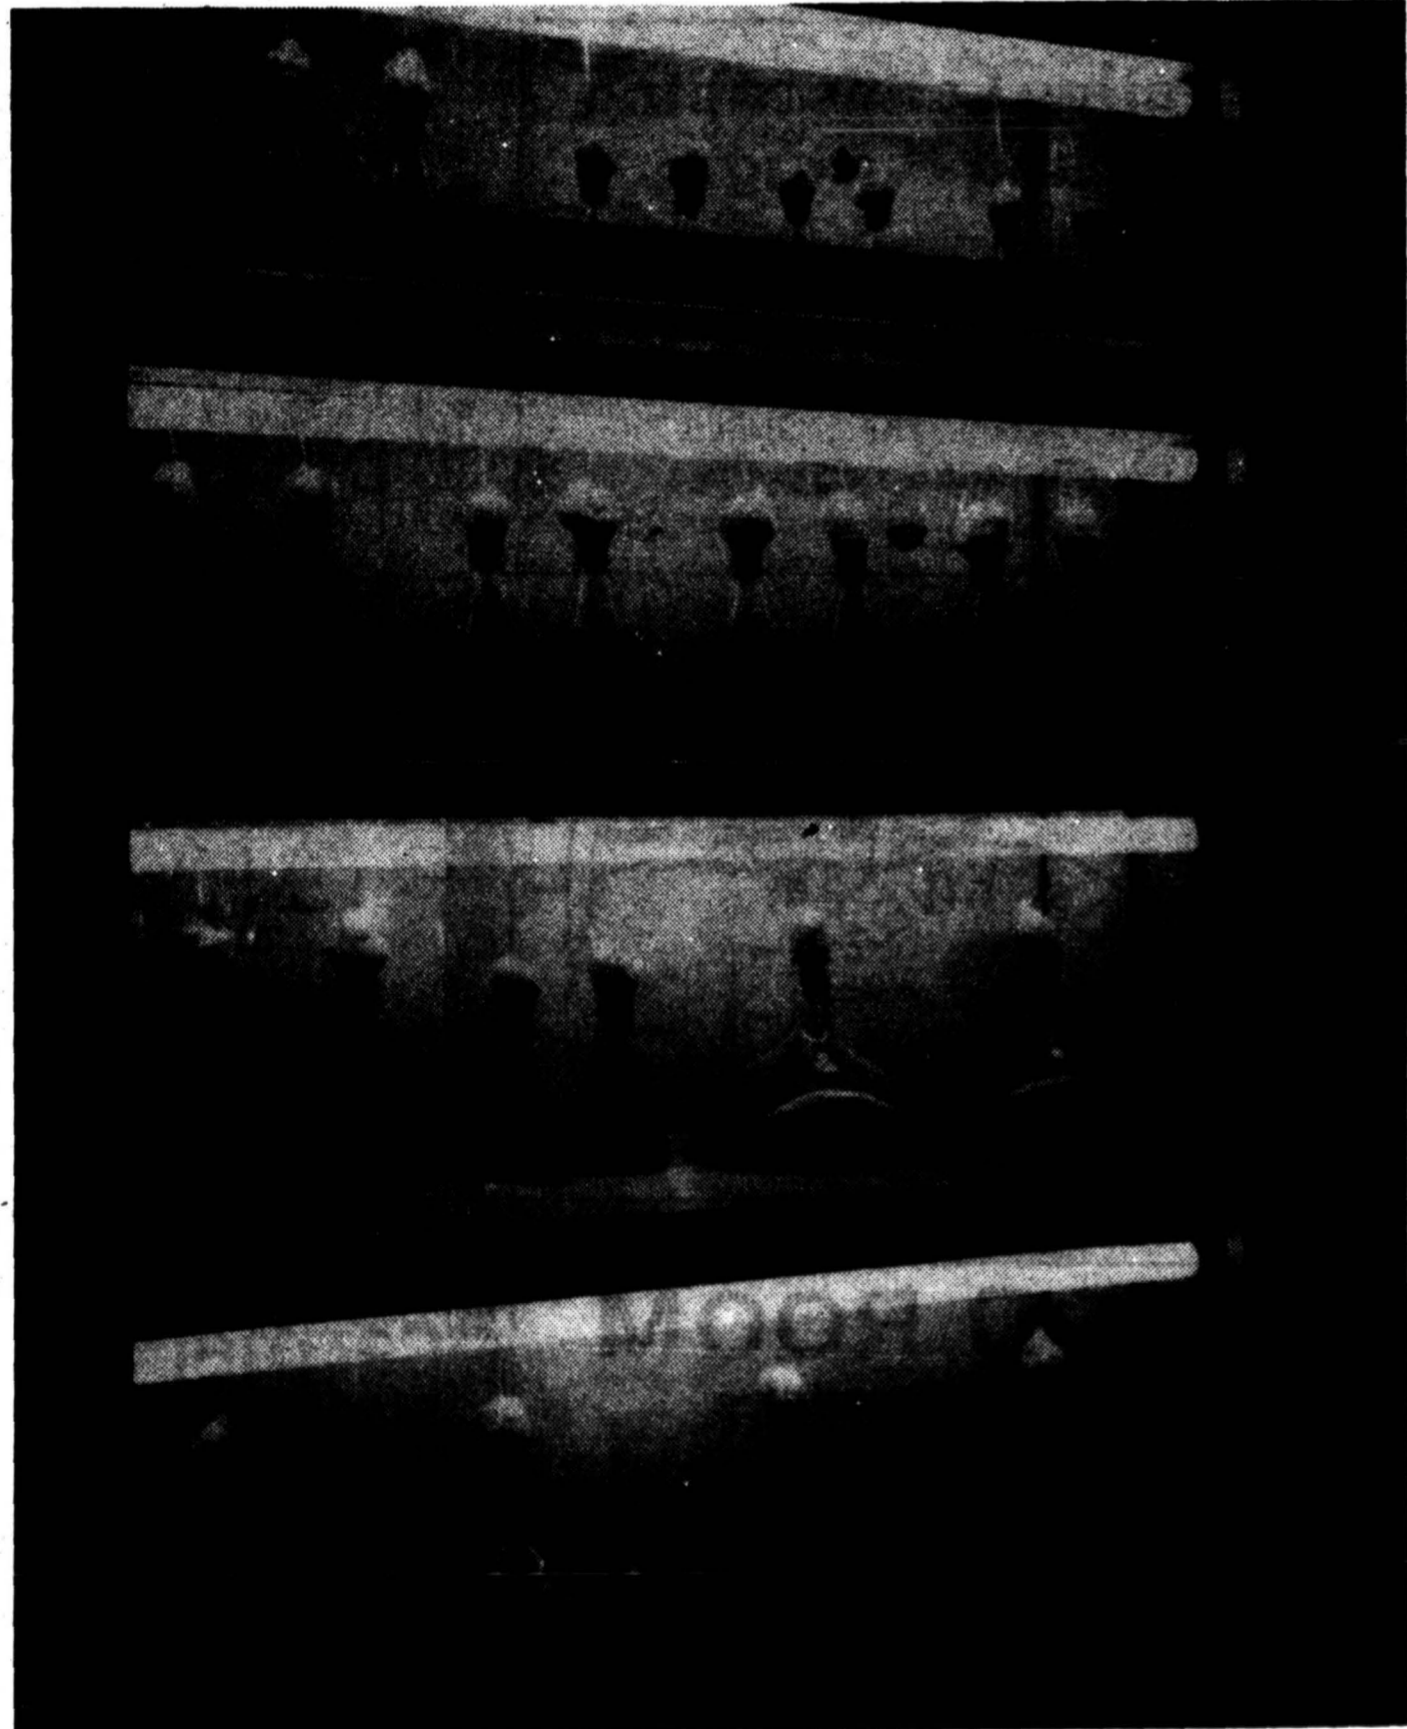

"We're devising a system where you can take marine animals, such as anchovies, mussels, abalone, small crustaceans and kelp, and subject them to different levels of pollutants and chart the effect," explained Hunt, who came to the lab through the state university-operated Moss Landing Marine Laboratories.

Gentlemen of rugby to return to Pebble Beach

RUGGED ruffians from 32 top college and club rugby teams from the United States, Canada and England will clash Saturday and Sunday, May 4-5, at Collins field in Pebble Beach.

It's the 27th Annual Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees as a charity fund-raising event. The event also features the Sixth Annual Michelob National Collegiate Championships.

Play begins at 7 a.m. Saturday and at 8:30 a.m. Sunday. The national collegiate championship game begins at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, and the tournament championship game at 2:15 p.m. Sunday.

The Monterey Rugby Club and the Santa Cruz Rebels are two local rugby clubs which will compete.

Competing in the national rugby collegiate championship at 12:10 p.m. Saturday will be the University of California, Berkeley and the University of Colorado. Clashing at 1:45 p.m. Saturday will be the University of Illinois and University of Maryland squads.

Also competing will be an English team, the Old Pilgrim Fathers, from Devon, England.

Organized under the auspices of the U.S. Rugby Football Union, the Michelob National Collegiate Rugby Championship is the culmination tournament for territorial finalists representing colleges and universities from the East, Midwest, West, and Pacific Coast.

This year's collegiate championship will run concurrently and highlight the 27th Annual Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees and the Northern California Rugby Football Union.

How is it that the Monterey Peninsula has become home to an annual tournament for a game developed in an English boy's school in the 1500s?

It started in 1959 when Paul ("Boomer") Andrew, a California football alumnus, brought rugby to neutral Central California to decide a northern and southern state playoff. Eleven teams turned out the next year and the tournament has grown and prospered since — mainly as a result of the inclusion as co-sponsor of the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees, who organize the fields, concessions, medical support, publicity, ticket sales, and social services.

The Northern California Rugby Union handles team invitations, referees, and tournament play. This staffing provides a safe and relaxed picnic atmosphere, unlike the big stadium setting of football, and fans are allowed to mingle along the sidelines as well as having grandstand seating.

Proceeds from ticket and concession sales go to local charities and community projects, as well as Northern California Youth Rugby.

Tickets may be purchased on the days of the tournament at the Highway 1/17 Mile Drive gate entrance to Pebble Beach, as well as at the fields for $6 a day, $10 a weekend.

PLAYERS TAKE part in a line-out during rugby play. The 27th Annual Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament and Fifth Annual Michelob National Collegiate Championship come to Pebble Beach Saturday and Sunday, May 4-5.

Crisis line volunteers trained

The Community Counseling Center will offer a weekend seminar on counseling and crisis intervention skills for people interested in volunteering on the center's 24-hour crisis line.

The next training will take place 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 18 and 19 at the Counseling Center, 590 Pearl St., Monterey. For details, call Ruth Feldman at the Community Counseling Center, 373-4773.

Volunteer counselors learn and develop communication and counseling skills in order to handle a wide variety of calls on the crisis line. In addition, volunteers provide information and referrals to clientele about community services. Education and training are ongoing learning opportunities for the volunteer counselors.

The Community Counseling Center provides counseling and crisis intervention services to youth and family on the Monterey Peninsula. These include individual and family counseling, runaway services, parent education groups, a schools program and community outreach.

Trained volunteer counselors cover the 24-hour crisis line and act as an important link between community resources and people in need of services.

Carmel competition draws chamber musicians

THE CHAMBER Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will present winners of the 14th annual national competition for chamber music ensembles at its awards concert, 3 p.m. Sunday, May 5, in Sunset Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Auditions for the competing young musicians who come from university music departments and conservatories around the nation will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 4, in Sunset Theater. The auditions are open to the public and are free of charge.

The Chamber Music Society, through its awards program, seeks to encourage young musicians to pursue chamber music as a career. For the 14th time the annual awards concert is the highlight of the chamber music season. Winners of the society's national competition for strings, winds and piano are presented.

Four awards are available this year. Two first place awards of $2,000 each will be given. One, for strings with or without keyboard or woodwind, is made possible by two anonymous donors who are members of the society.

The other, for woodwinds and brass, is available through donations by members of the society and major gifts from the City of Carmel and the Bing Crosby Youth Fund. Other awards are the $1,500 Florence Allen Award and the $1,000 W. Frederick Schaad Award.

A two-tier judging procedure is employed. Applicants must be less than 26 years of age and submit a tape recording of their interpretations of two contrasting compositions. A screening committee of five local musicians, using the tape recordings, selects the successful applicants who will then compete before a blue ribbon panel of five judges. The winners are announced at the end of the Saturday auditions and will perform at the awards concert on Sunday.

This year 15 applicants from prestigious university music departments and conservatories submitted tapes. Eight ensembles were selected to compete for the awards.

Members of the selection committee are David Hagemeyer, violist, violinist and chamber musician; Camille Oleata, pianist on the Monterey Peninsula College faculty; Carmen Martin, cellist, principal in the Monterey County Symphony and chamber musician; Sue Amon, clarinet, performer and judge for reed instruments; Carl Christensen, trumpet, performer and member of the Hartnell College faculty.

William Corbett-Jones will be judge coordinator for the eight finalists on Saturday. He is professor of music at San Francisco State University and a pianist. He has performed throughout North America, Europe and Africa as an orchestra soloist, recitalist and chamber musician.

Other judges of the finalists will include Charles Fulkerson, pianist and violist, retired conductor of the Humboldt Symphony and pianist in chamber music ensembles. Robert Karon, trumpet, UCLA alumnus and the Juilliard School, has toured South America, Europe and the Far East with the Mexico City Philharmonic. He is now principal trumpet in the Santa Barbara Symphony and Pasadena Chamber Orchestra and head of the brass department at the Yamaha Music Education Center in Irvine.

Sven Reher, violist and composer, received his early music education at the Berlin Hochschule fur Musik, going on to UCLA where he was a student of Arnold Schoenberg. He has been on the faculty of a number of universities, including UCLA, and is a member of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. He is presently principal violist in the San Luis Obispo County Symphony and the California Chamber Symphony.

Rosario Mazzeo, clarinet, is an author, teacher and lecturer. He retired to Carmel after a distinguished career with the Boston Symphony.

Single tickets for the Sunday awards concert are $4 at the door before the concert. The Saturday auditions are open to the public and are free of charge.

The Chamber Music Society welcomes donations in support of its Awards Program for young musicians. Membership in the Chamber Music Society for the 1985/86 season are now available. For information, call 372-5981.

Carmel Bach Festival tickets available to local residents

SINGLE TICKETS for the 48th annual Carmel Bach Festival July 15-Aug. 4 continue to be available to Monterey Peninsula residents today and tomorrow, May 2-3, before general sale to the public.

Tickets can be purchased at the festival office, Room 11 in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Among the works to be performed this season will be Bach's Mass in B Minor; The Art of the Fugue; the complete Brandenburg Concertos and Mozart's Piano Concerto in C; Vivaldi's Concerto in C and Handel's opera Imeneo, sung in English with concert staging.

With the expansion to a full three weeks, more single tickets are available than in former years. Ticket prices for the concerts at Sunset Theater are $13, $15 and $17. Except for the Saturday morning piano recital and Art of the Fugue, all recitals will be presented at the Golden Bough Theater, Carmel. Recital tickets are $5 each and the Art of the Fugue is $8.

For more information, call 624-1521 or write P.O. Box 575, Carmel, Calif. 93921.

WHAT'S PLAYING AT THE MOVIES

Amadeus: Peter Shaffer's Broadway hit about Mozart gets full, if time-consuming, Hollywood treatment. Milos Forman directs this multiple-Oscar winner. Rated PG. At the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

The Breakfast Club: Forced to serve all-day library detention, five high school students who think they have little in common discover the opposite to be true. Written and directed by John Hughes, The Breakfast Club cast includes Emilio Estevez, Molly Ringwald and Ally Sheedy. Rated R. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Code of Silence: Chuck Norris plays a Chicago detective who breaks the police department's "code of silence" when an officer is suspected of having staged evidence at the scene of a boy's death. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Creature: Alien beings, dormant on a strange planet for 200,000 years, wake up and smell the coffee. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Desperately Seeking Susan: Madonna, Rosanna Arquette and Robert Joy star in this offbeat romantic adventure. Susan (Smithereens) Seidelman directs. Rated PG-13. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

Girls Just Want to Have Fun: Sarah Jessica Parker stars in this musical comedy/romance in which a Catholic schoolgirl wants to audition for an MTV program. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

The Gods Must Be Crazy: Coke bottle prompts strife among African bushmen when the chief, Xi, decides to run with it to the edge of the earth and throw it away. There he encounters "civilized" characters, and the laughter increases. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Just One of the Guys: In order to make it in the world of journalism, a young woman masquerades as a man. It's a comedy. Rated PG-13. At the Carmel Village Theatre. 624-5341.

Ladyhawk: Magic, love and adventure are the elements of this legend set in the Dark Ages. Rutger Hauer, Michelle Pfeiffer and Matthew Broderick star in the medieval romance. Rated PG-13. At the Valley Cinema. 624-5111.

Lost in America: Successful advertising exec decides to chuck it all and packs it into his Winnebago to find truth on the highways of America. Rated R. At the Cinema 70. 373-4777.

Mask: Cher portrays the mother of a disfigured boy who grows up in the rough and tumble world of motorcyclists. Sam Elliot co-stars. Directed by Peter Bogdanovich. Rated PG-13. At the Golden Bough Theatre. 624-4044.

Moving Violations: Misfits, malcontents and dreamers, played by John Murray, Jennifer Tilly, James Keach, Sally Kellerman and Clara ("Where's the Beef") Peller meet in traffic school. From the creators of Bachelor Party and Police Academy. Rated PG-13. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Stick: Burt Reynolds stars in the title role as an ex-convict who is given one last chance to go straight amid the turbulent underside of Florida's posh Gold Coast. Rated R. At the Regency Theatre. 375-6696.

"We'll subject adults and also younger stages to different levels of different pollutants. It's been done for many years in fresh water and mostly with just a couple of animals."

"Even for industries that discharge wastes into the ocean, they've used fresh water animals (in their testing), which doesn't make a lot of sense ecologically."

HUNT SAID that once the system is developed to a reliable point, industries will be asked to perform the same tests on their discharged wastes.

"Even for industries that discharge wastes into the ocean, they've used fresh water animals (in their testing), which doesn't make a lot of sense ecologically."

Resources Control Board. The chemical contaminants to be tested on marine life include DDT and PCB, according to a Marine Pollution Studies Laboratory press release.

Hunt, who will work with state biologists, summarized his job: "I grow 'em and they poison 'em."

In 1982 the lab lost its $150,000 annual federal funding, obtained through the Federal Bartlett Bill Act for Commercial Fisheries, Research and Development. Funding was picked up by the California Department of Fish and Game.

"Pollution we're aware of but we're not spending many dollars to do something about it," said lab director Earl Ebert. "A program like this which specializes in research and development is a low-priority program. Thanks to double-digit inflation, you get caught in the meat grinder."

While the staff size has remained unchanged since federal funding times, graduate students who work for educational credit or minimal pay have helped keep research going.

"We're going to have to address environmental issues because our very quality of life is at stake," noted Ebert from his office in view of the sea. "Take any 10 people and they will give you different answers as to what part humans play in all this."

The Marine Pollution Studies and Marine Culture laboratories are nine miles south of Carmel from the Ocean Avenue intersection. The facilities are located at Granite Canyon near Soberanes Point, on the ocean side of Highway 1.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Two Genet works tackled by Unicorn Theater group

AT CHERRY Hall in Carmel, Unicorn Theater Presents tackles a complex, compact one-act drama, The Maids, double-billed with a whimsical comic play, Orpheus, both by innovative French underworld novelist and dramatist Jean Genet. The Maids is far and away the more successful of the two.

Genet was an innovative force in the French drama of the 1940s and 1950s who broke with stage traditions to create intense psychological dramas that grappled with the problem of psychological survival in an intolerant, unequal society.

In The Maids, written in 1954, Genet uses a single setting — the boudoire of a wealthy lady (Madame) and a pair of domestic servants (Claire and Solange) — to explore a universal issue: the crumbling of individual self-worth under the pressures of society's norms.

The substance of The Maids is the clockwork of inner subversion, for Claire and Solange partake of Madame's belief in their inferiority. It is their inner subversion ("I know I disgust you," Solange admits to Claire, "because I know you disgust me.") that warps and twists them, not their subservience to Madame.

But the maids themselves are metaphor, for the heart of Genet's matter is in neither the lines nor the action. It is made palpable in director Carey Crockett's decision to cast men in all three women's roles, as Genet himself envisioned the play. The Maids is Genet's tacit exploration of the homosexual psyche which warps under the strain of society's condemnation.

Genet portrays the closet homosexual strangled by self-hatred, stunted by repression, desperately parodying the straight society that will not tolerate deviation from the norm.

Thus Clair and Solange, in the absence of their mistress, mimic her behavior and take turns dominating each other, in an elaborate ritual game that is compelling theater. Although Claire and Solange are consumed with hatred for Madame, even they are unconvinced by this projection of their self-loathing.

'It's Fore Fun' commences Monday

POOR playing ability is no handicap in the It's Fore Fun golf tournament, which pulls into Rancho Canada Golf Club on Monday, May 6.

The tournament has two divisions, a straight golf competition sponsored by Jack London's Bar and Bistro and a "wacky golf" category sponsored by Friar Tuck's Restaurant. Friar Tuck's owner Greg Cellitti and Jack London's owner Al Fiore have joined forces to present the first It's Fore Fun. Proceeds will benefit the Community Alcohol Center, a division of the Community Human Services Project.

The $40 entry fee includes greens fees, tee prizes, golf carts, a box lunch plus beverages and hors d'oeuvres at Jack London's "Victory Party."

Tee off time is 9 a.m. For more information about It's Fore Fun or the Community Alcohol Center, call 899-4134.

Carey Crockett's graceful setting features an empty mirror frame center stage that makes its own silent statement on the power of the self-image, and Max Robert's costumes are just right.

As Solange, Robert offers a subtle, masterful performance which runs a gamut of powerful emotions with great control and no false notes. George Goncalves manages Claire's parody of Madame and the contrasting timorousness of Claire's own character very well. As Madame, Crockett well conveys the wily disdain of the rich for lesser creatures, but Crockett is less adept than Robert and Goncalves at the gestures and postures of his female role.

THE DEVICE of using men to play women's roles adds dimension to Genet's point.

The audience experiences a kind of double vision: we believe in the characters created before our eyes and they are women, but we know the actors playing these characters are men. This antithetical illusion stresses our emotions, and thus gives us a sense of the devastating emotional cost of sacrificing the self's integrity in order to survive in a society.

This painful, absorbing examination of the human psyche estranged from itself is moving theater that will entirely engage your attention and leave you with a great deal to think about.

UTP follows this tour de force with a light-hearted fantasy based on the myth of Orpheus' journey to the underworld to reclaim his beloved Eurydice. On opening night, Orpheus seemed to me simply not ready to open.

Director C.T. Chase presents a highly imaginative treatment of Genet's charming whimsical piece. Legendary musician Orpheus, for example, is a guitar-slinging cowboy with a penchant for poetry, and Death is an outsized Cyndi Lauper sort of lady (Megan Harris), backed up by a pair of very funny minions — Carey Crockett as an oafish neophyte ghoul and Max Robert as a clickety-clack robot. Robert and Crockett are also a bright spot as Laurel-and-Hardy bureaucrats.

Unfortunately, the production did not gel and, in the leading roles, Max Kelly (Orpheus), Renee Farjeon (Eurydice) and Elizabeth Sims (Heurtebise) lack the chemistry necessary to ignite the spark of live theater.

What might have been a delightful balance to the devastating emotional demands of The Maids was instead a lamely executed performance of a most imaginatively conceived production. The direction needs work.

I would not let the shortcomings of Orpheus keep me from attending The Maids, however, which offers a riveting hour and a half with performances by Robert and Goncalves that no serious theatergoer will want to miss.

Society screens 'Le Bal,' 'La Notte'

Ettore Scola's award-winning Le Bal and Antonioni's La Notte will be shown by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

In Le Bal, director Scola covers 50 years of French history and demonstrates dramatic changes of time from the 1930s to the present without spoken dialogue. The 1984 film won best picture at the Berlin Film Festival. It will be screened Friday through Sunday, May 3-5.

Marcello Mastroianni, Jeanne Moreau and Monica Vitti share the screen in La Notte. The 1961 feature, in Italian with subtitles, follows the disintegrating marriage of an upper-middle-class couple. It will be shown Wednesday, May 8.

Both films begin at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general, $2.75 students and seniors, $2 for film society members. For details, call 659-4795 between 5 p.m. and show time.

Dance auditions scheduled

Dance auditions are slated for the "In Jazz Tense" program planned by director/choreographer Gaye Mikel Bennett. Dancers 18 and over will be auditioned from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Friday, May 3. Location will be the Old Monterey Music Hall, 425 Washington St., Monterey. For more information, call 625-5598 between 10 a.m. and noon.

Alliance on Aging seeks aid

Volunteers are sought to recruit local businesses for inclusion in the Golden State Senior Discount Program, a service of the Alliance on Aging. Senior Information, Referral and Assistance Service.

"Basically, the job of the volunteer is to briefly explain the program and provide the merchant with an opportunity to enroll," said Wally LeValley, senior discount coordinator for the alliance.

Participation, explained LeValley, means that the business agrees to offer a discount to shoppers 60 or older. Name of the business, location, telephone number and discount offered will be published this July in the alliance senior discount directory.

Two volunteer trainings have already taken place at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center.

"The training takes two hours," LeValley said. "And it's very informal. Some of the volunteers meet for lunch and work in pairs." They canvass businesses in Carmel, Carmel Valley, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside and Marina.

Volunteers set their own schedules.

"We're flexible and we're not looking for a long commitment. We'll be finished enrolling the merchants by the end of May or early June," LeValley said.

For more information about the Golden State Senior Discount Program or volunteer training, call the Alliance on Aging between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, 646-4636.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

From the archives

APRIL in 1953 appears to have been a busy month here.

"The Carl Cherry Foundation," says a newspaper article of the time, "was host to some 50 guests assembled to meet two outstanding personalities sent by Prime Minister Nehru as cultural and spiritual 'ambassadors' of the government of India. They were Dr. Dilip Kumar Roy and Miss Indira Devi." Both were evidently devotees of Sri Aurobindo and lived in his community at Pondicherry.

"The two artists presented last evening at the Cherry Foundation studio an impressive program of music and dance, in native Indian costume, designed not so much for entertainment as for an expression of philosophy.

"The program included three songs, The Spirit of India, given in Sanskrit, German and English, and hymns to the sun and the moon, also sung in varied languages; and two dances by Miss Devi, to the accompaniment of soft music produced by Roy on an instrument resembling a small hand organ, and the tinkle of ankle bells.

"The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Cherry and the two artists introduced by Miss Maud Oakes of Big Sur, with whom they are staying during their peninsula visit."

A few days later, Virginia Shaw wrote in the Carmel Pine Cone of a "Cherry Foundation Springtime Festival" at the Golden Bough Theatre. "One of the delightful things about all of the Cherry Foundation's concerts this season," she wrote, "has been their pleasant informality; instruments are piled around the rear of the stage, scores are lost and found, entrances and exits are effected with a maximum of goodnatured disorder.

"Mrs. Carl Cherry presided over the harpsichord for the early part of the program, retiring to the audience later. The recorders were particularly fine. All deserve thanks for the gift of music they have brought to audiences here."

Among those who participated are listed some names still among our friends — Flavia Flavin, Jeradine Lamb and Jean Smith. Are there other readers who remember this concert?

Superstars

Carmel River School students from Patrick Allan's fifth grade class will perform in Superstars. The two-act musical is based on the works of children's author Maurice Sendak.

Superstars will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 2-3, at Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Cast members are Bryan Bennett, Julian Bernstein, Desiree Castro, Andrew Clark, Joelle Collard, Ian d'Ombrian, Carl Dauphine, Alex Premier, Damian Criss, David Grubbs, Stefan Hudson, Anne-Marie Jones, Nicole Lepage, Elizabeth Linhart-Money, Elliot Maiorana, Jeff McGowan, Frank Melicia, Loren Moore, David Palshaw, Andrew Pekler, Edward Phillips, Leilani Seltzer, Philip Tennant, Jeannine Trudeau, Amelia Wilkinson, Mandy Zeid, Cole Zimmerman, Belinda Olivera and Tillio Olcese.

Admission is $4 general, $3 for senior citizens and students.

The Lady's Not for Burning

Comedy and lyricism are married in The Lady's Not for Burning, which concludes its run Sunday at the Indoor Forest Theatre in Carmel.

The Staff Players Repertory Company will stage Christopher Fry's most famous comedy — the tale of a 15th century witch hunt — at 8 p.m. Thursday through Sunday, May 2-5.

The Indoor Forest Theatre is at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. Tickets are $6 for general admission and $4 for students and senior citizens. Reservations: 624-1531.

Orpheus/The Maids

French absurdist drama and surrealist comedy by two theatrical jeans — Genet and Cocteau — are brought to Cherry Hall by Unicorn Theatre Presents.

A peninsula premiere of Genet's The Maids features, as the author intended, male performers in women's roles. Cocteau's Orpheus emerges as an '80s soufflé that features, among other characters, a cowboy-poet, bewitched horse and beatnik bride, lesbian glazier and a pair of silent-screen buffoons.

The double bill plays 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, April 26 through May 19. Cherry Hall is at Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel. Admission is by tax-deductible donation: $6 general; $5 per person for groups of 10 or more. Reservations: 375-8875.

Grease

The '50s-based musical, Grease, is presented by the Robert Louis Stevenson School Drama Department Thursday through Saturday, May 2-4. This production also will be staged by the ensemble this summer when it represents the United States at the Aberdeen International Youth Festival in Scotland.

Curtain is at 8 nightly. Tickets are $8 for adults, $5 for students. Robert Louis Stevenson School is in Pebble Beach. Reservations: 624-1257.

Jesse and the Bandit Queen

Jesse and the Bandit Queen relates the saga of the legendary Jesse James and Belle Starr as well as their outlaw contemporaries in this California Repertory Theatre production.

Closing performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 2-5. There will also be a 2 p.m. matinee Saturday, May 2. Tickets are $9 to $13.

Cal Rep is at 125 Ocean View Blvd. near the Monterey Bay

Present Laughter

Aging matinee idol Garry Essendine, his retinue of devoted followers and an extended African tour are the starting point for Noel Coward's Present Laughter.

Staged at The Wharf Theater, the comedy plays at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 8 p.m. Sundays through June 9. Ticket prices are $6 and $8. The Wharf Theater is on Old Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey. Reservations: 372-2882.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

George and Martha battle for supremacy in the California Repertory Theatre production of Edward Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

The drama continues at 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, May 7-8. There will be a 2 p.m. matinee Wednesday, May 8, as well.

Tickets are $9 to $13. Cal Rep is at 125 Ocean View Blvd. near the Monterey Bay Aquarium in the American Tin Cannery, Pacific Grove. Reservations: 372-4373.

Chicago

The Fort Ord Cabaret Theatre presents Chicago, a musical vaudeville in which chorine Roxie Hart murders a faithless lover.

Chicago plays at 8 p.m. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through May 19. General admission is $4, military admission is $3. The Cabaret Theatre is at Fourth Street and Fourth Avenue, Fort Ord. Reservations: 242-6337.

Pajama Tops

This French bedroom farce with philandering husband, flirtatious maid and other characters plays Thursdays through Sundays at the Studio Theatre Restaurant, Dolores Street near Ocean Avenue, Carmel.

Dinner is served at 7 p.m., with curtain at 8:30 p.m. Times are one hour earlier on Sundays. Dinner and show price is $22.50. Tickets: 624-1661.

A Working Girl's Wrongs

Troupers of the Gold Coast perform at 8:30 p.m. each Friday and Saturday in the oldest theater in the state, California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific streets in Monterey.

Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and teens, and $3 for children younger than 12. For information, call 375-4916 after 1 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

ETCHINGS by the Venetian artist Giovanni Piranesi (above) will be on display at the Pasquale Iannetti Art Gallery, Sixth and Mission, Carmel from May 4-31. An opening reception is planned from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday, May 3.

Etchings, engravings by Giovanni Piranesi shown

AN EXHIBIT of more than 35 etchings by Giovanni Battista Piranesi, 18th century Venetian artist, architect and etcher, will be displayed at the Pasquale Iannetti Art Gallery, Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

The show begins Saturday, May 4 and continues through Friday, May 31. An opening reception is planned 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday, May 3.

Giovanni Battista Piranesi was born in 1720 in Venice. His father was a master builder and stonemason. His uncle, an architect and engineer, trained Piranesi as an architect. An older brother, a Carthusian monk, taught him Latin and the history of ancient Rome. As a youth in Venice Piranesi also studied design for the theater.

In 1740 at the age of 20, Piranesi first saw Rome while engaged as a draftsman in the retinue of the Venetian ambassador to the papal court. During this first stay in Rome he studied engraving under Giuseppe Vasi, an architect and engraver. Piranesi's friendship with the keeper of the Vatican Library gave him access to the works of Rembrandt and Callot, which made a strong and lasting impression.

Piranesi's early work, "The First Part of the Architectural and Perspective Views," revealed qualities which were to endure as the essence of his mature creations.

In 1744, for lack of money, Piranesi had to go home to Venice where tradition holds that he worked in the studio of G.B. Tiepolo. While in Venice and still in his early 20s, Piranesi created the four plates to his "Grotteschi" and his "Prisons."

Piranesi returned to Rome in 1745 as an agent for a print dealer in Venice. He rented a studio and began to print views of Rome, first the small format of the "Varie Vedute di Roma" in 1745, and then the first plates of his series the "Vedute di Roma," begun in 1748, to which he would add several plates each year for the next 30 years, until his death in 1778.

In 1765 Piranesi received from the pope the title of "Knight of the Golden Spurs," and signed his name thereafter "Cavalier." The last decade of his life he continued adding to the "Views of Rome" while he published other architectural, antiquarian and archaeological series.

In 1777 he created his last series, the "Views of Paestum," published in 1778 several months before his death in Rome at age 58. He is buried in the church of St. Maria Aventina, on the Aventine Hill.

For additional information about the Piranesi exhibit at Pasquale Iannetti Gallery, call 625-2923.

Youth Baseball, Little League begin

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

CARMEL Youth Baseball is underway once again at Larson Field, sporting a brand-new field especially for the Pinto (seven to eight years) T-Ball Division.

Carmel Realtors, coached by Dick McGonigal and Aaron Eppler, and Books, Inc., coached by John Northcote and Dave Miller, met last week to start Mustang (nine to 10 years) play with BI coming out ahead 10-6. Alex Stott was pitcher of record and also was lead hitter for BI. Jeremy Byrd tripled for CR and John Bohlman doubled for BI.

The following day, Dick Bruhn, managed by Frank Melicia, defeated County Mounties, managed by Bob Rice and Joe Maggiore, 8-2. Mark Colliard pitched the win and Andrew Martin doubled for DB.

In the Bronco Division, La Playa, coached by Mike and Steve Prieto, and Derek Rayne, coached by Jerry Rotharmel, tied 8-8 last Wednesday in the sixth inning. The game was called because of darkness.

La Playa came from behind in the bottom of the sixth to tie the game with a well-timed double by Rick Prieto. Rick was also LP's lead hitter with two doubles to his credit. Mark Fanderl also doubled for LP, as did Michael Parrish for DR.

On Saturday, La Playa defeated Pine Inn, coached by Jim and Lou Langley, 15-6 due to a well-hit seventh inning for LP which brought in 10 of their runs. Chris Prieto did a superb job of pitching the win.

Big hitters for LP were Devin Meheen with three doubles, Bain Smith with two, going 3-5, Dennis Sketchley with one, going 3-4, and Chris Prieto, going 2-5. Dennis Phillips hit a strong single, bringing in a run. Lead hitters for PI were Travis Smith with a double and a single and Mario Bertolucci, who doubled.

Directly afterwards, Derek Rayne lost to Carmel Valley Disposal, coached by Joe DeRuosi, 16-9. Sky Feekes pitched the win and Jon Shoemaker made a spectacular hit over the fence in left field for the first home run of the season.

IN MINOR Softball, Carmel Plaza, managed by Jeffrey Spirit and Jack Doran, fell to the Clam Box, coached by Alan Richards and Martha Simon, 5-2 in an exciting game which produced two home runs by Amy Tarantino for CB and Gina Serrano for CP.

Gina also doubled for CP, as did Rebecca Prkrywinski for CB. Missy Cardoza and Lisa Desimone were the winning pitchers. Suzanne Baker, CB, made a nice play at first base.

Carmel Plaza defeated the Phillies, coached by Steve and Liz Dyer and Gary Gray, on April 22 with Gina Serrano pitching the win. Doubles were earned by Jesse Weston and Jennifer Johnson, both for CP.

One of the Pinto teams this year is Bay Bakes, managed by Ron Allen and Don Saxby. Team players are Matthew Allen, Shanon d'Ombrian, Zebulon Geary, Scott Ketcham, Casey Lee, Alex Lewis, Matthew Mink, Seamus O'Reilly, Brendan Richards, Thaya Saxby, Quincy Struve, Nicholas Tamburri, Quinn Thompson, and Randall Zug.

CARMEL artist Oronzo Abbatecola will show an exhibit of his space paintings in honor of National Astronomy Week. Receptions are planned Friday and Saturday, May 3-4, at the Henderikus de Groot Gallery,

'Salute to Astronomy' to begin at Carmel gallery

SPACE paintings by Italian futurist Oronzo Abbatecola will highlight an artistic salute to National Astronomy Week at the Henderikus de Groot Gallery in Carmel.

Receptions are planned at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. both Friday and Saturday, May 3-4, at the gallery on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln streets. The paintings will be displayed through June.

"A Pathway to the Cosmos" is the theme the artist has selected to convey his astronomical salute. Abbatecola was born in Ceglie del Campo, Bari, Italy, and emigrated to the United States before World War II. His work has been exhibited in Europe and South America, and his paintings were first shown in Carmel in 1955.

The collection at Henderikus de Groot Gallery includes works that represent more than 30 years of research in astronomy, mythology and symbolism by Abbatecola.

"All beings have some form of awakened consciousness in space. To some this awareness seems confined to narrow limits," Abbatecola observed. "Creation is the result of cosmic brooding of the seed of life that comes from a well-developed special consciousness. 'Metafisica' signifies man's search for his relationship to the external world, his attempt to discover or create some order in the apparent chaos of galaxies and stars."

The artist peppers his oil paintings with stars, planets, constellations and mythological symbols. For more information about this show, call 624-2225.

CAA features Cunningham works

Starting May 2, the Carmel Art Association will present — besides the regular, all-member show — a one-man exhibit of the work of John Cunningham. Nobody on the peninsula has been a teacher of art as long as John, nor has any other local artist studied and worked with as many great artists.

Cunningham holds an A.B. and an M.A. in art from the University of California, Berkeley. He was awarded an honorary traveling fellowship to study with Hans Hofmann in Munich, and later with Andre L'hotte in Paris. Cunningham also worked with sculptor Beniamino Bufano in Cagnes Sur Mer, France. At that time they sculpted in porphyry, which is eight times as hard as granite.

He started his teaching career at the Cranbrook Institute in Michigan, but has had the Carmel Art Institute since the 1930s. John has probably influenced more art students than anybody else this side of the Rockies. In October of 1941, he arranged for the famous Fernand Leger to give a two-week symposium workshop.

Those were the days when Carmel had enough prestige to attract big names. Leger traveled with a translator, Jacqueline Roux, who was also his mistress.

Among those who attended the workshop were Sam Colburn, Gene McComas, Paul Mays and Jean Kellogg. The Carmel Art Institute was forced out of its quarters in the Court of the Golden Bough many years ago by a severe raise in rent, but is now happily situated in the old Flanders mansion off Hatton Drive.

Twelve of his paintings are on permanent display at the L. Nelson Galleries, Inc., of Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, and he is a consistent contributor to the monthly shows at the Carmel Art Association. He is now president of that organization. (Sam Colburn)

PAINTINGS by Carmel Art Association president John Cunningham will be featured at the CAA galleries on Dolores Street through June 4. (Photograph by Michael Gardner).

CARMEL COMMERCIAL BUILDING

Price Reduced

The price has been lowered to $385,000 for this commercial office building located on the east side of Lincoln, the second north of 8th Avenue. The building is perfect for doctors' offices and contains 2,500 square feet of space. All units are currently rented.

HACIENDA ON FAIRWAY

Lovely Spanish villa near the 4th fairway of the Shore Course at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, this home at 3097 Hacienda Drive offers an ocean view and a serene setting among lovely oaks. It has 5 bedrooms, 5 baths and over 3,000 square feet that includes a 10 by 10 artist's studio. $495,000.

GOLFER'S DREAM/HOUSE

Step onto the 13th fairway at Spyglass Hill Golf Course from the dining room of this like-new 2 bedroom, 2 bath home. Located at 1090 Spyglass Woods Drive, this home offers all the extras and is a great buy for the golfer. It has a loft which could be a third bedroom and is situated on a quiet cul-de-sac. $349,000.

LOT PRICE LOWERED

Level lot on the northeast corner of Torres at 6th. Perfect for building on the edge of the business district. Adjacent to market and just a short walk to town. $145,000.

PRICE REDUCED

Elegance and style are the only words for this 5 bedroom, 4 bath home atop a knoll in Hatton Fields at 26259 Atherton Drive. It has over 3,250 square feet of living area and that includes separate quarters with two rooms and baths on the second floor. Extras include wet bar with stainless steel counter tops, ocean view, three bedroom suites, each with bath and outside entrance. $398,000.

CARMEL FEELING

The essence of Carmel charm is felt immediately when you walk into this 2 bedroom, 2 bath home at 2477 San Antonio Way. Located on Carmel Point, this home has been completely remodeled and updated. It has new carpet, new paint, and fence. There is a peek of the ocean from the living room and dining room. $350,000.

WALK TO TOWN

The location is one of the best things this great Carmel home has to offer. It's situated on the south side of 10th, the second west of Dolores, a short walk to the Village and beach. The home has been completely refurbished and offers a mixture of modern with the Carmel charm of wood and open beam ceilings. The third bedroom is a converted garage that could easily be changed back. Extras include a large deck with hot tub, drip irrigation system and top notch landscaping. $295,000.

LAST WATER-VIEW LOT IN PEBBLE

Bordering on the golf course of Monterey Peninsula Country Club 85 by 100 foot, this lot is one of the last with an ocean view. It has mature trees and has an 180° view of the beach, white water, rocky bluffs and green meadows. Surrounding homes are all valued at $800,000. $595,000.

A PEACEFUL RETREAT on PARTINGTON RIDGE in BIG SUR, CALIFORNIA

Looking from hot tub across lawn to copper roofed main house nestled on a hillside. Detached garage with studio above is in background. Not pictured is a very private, complete and utterly charming guest house which also enjoys views of ocean, mountains and canyon.

Off the living and dining rooms pictured above are two bedrooms and baths facing onto a long tree shaded deck. Below, opening to a second deck, are guest quarters; a bedroom, bath, sitting room and large storage room.

Sliding shoji screens and loft area are features of the bedroom pictured above. Close inspection reveals the careful craftsmanship and attention to detail used in constructing this artistic retreat from a busy world.

Yet another tree shaded deck off the large, sunny studio is used for reading, dining and relaxing while the owners restore their energies in this private world which they've created. Now it's time for them to move on; you can find peace in their stead. $750,000. Contact our Coast Properties Division for appointment.
